Even LGBT people are afraid to create LGBT rep half the time because you fucking goblins critique things with LGBT rep so harshly that the second it does something that you personally don't like it gets treated even worse than the shows that have absolutely no rep in them.

Demonizing every show that is earnestly trying to provide the rep we've been lacking is NOT THE WAY TO GET BETTER REP

This keeps us from getting LGBT+ rep that's actually interesting and in interesting situations! I want actual stories, but I guess you guys don't. You just want a perfect little picture to hang on your wall.

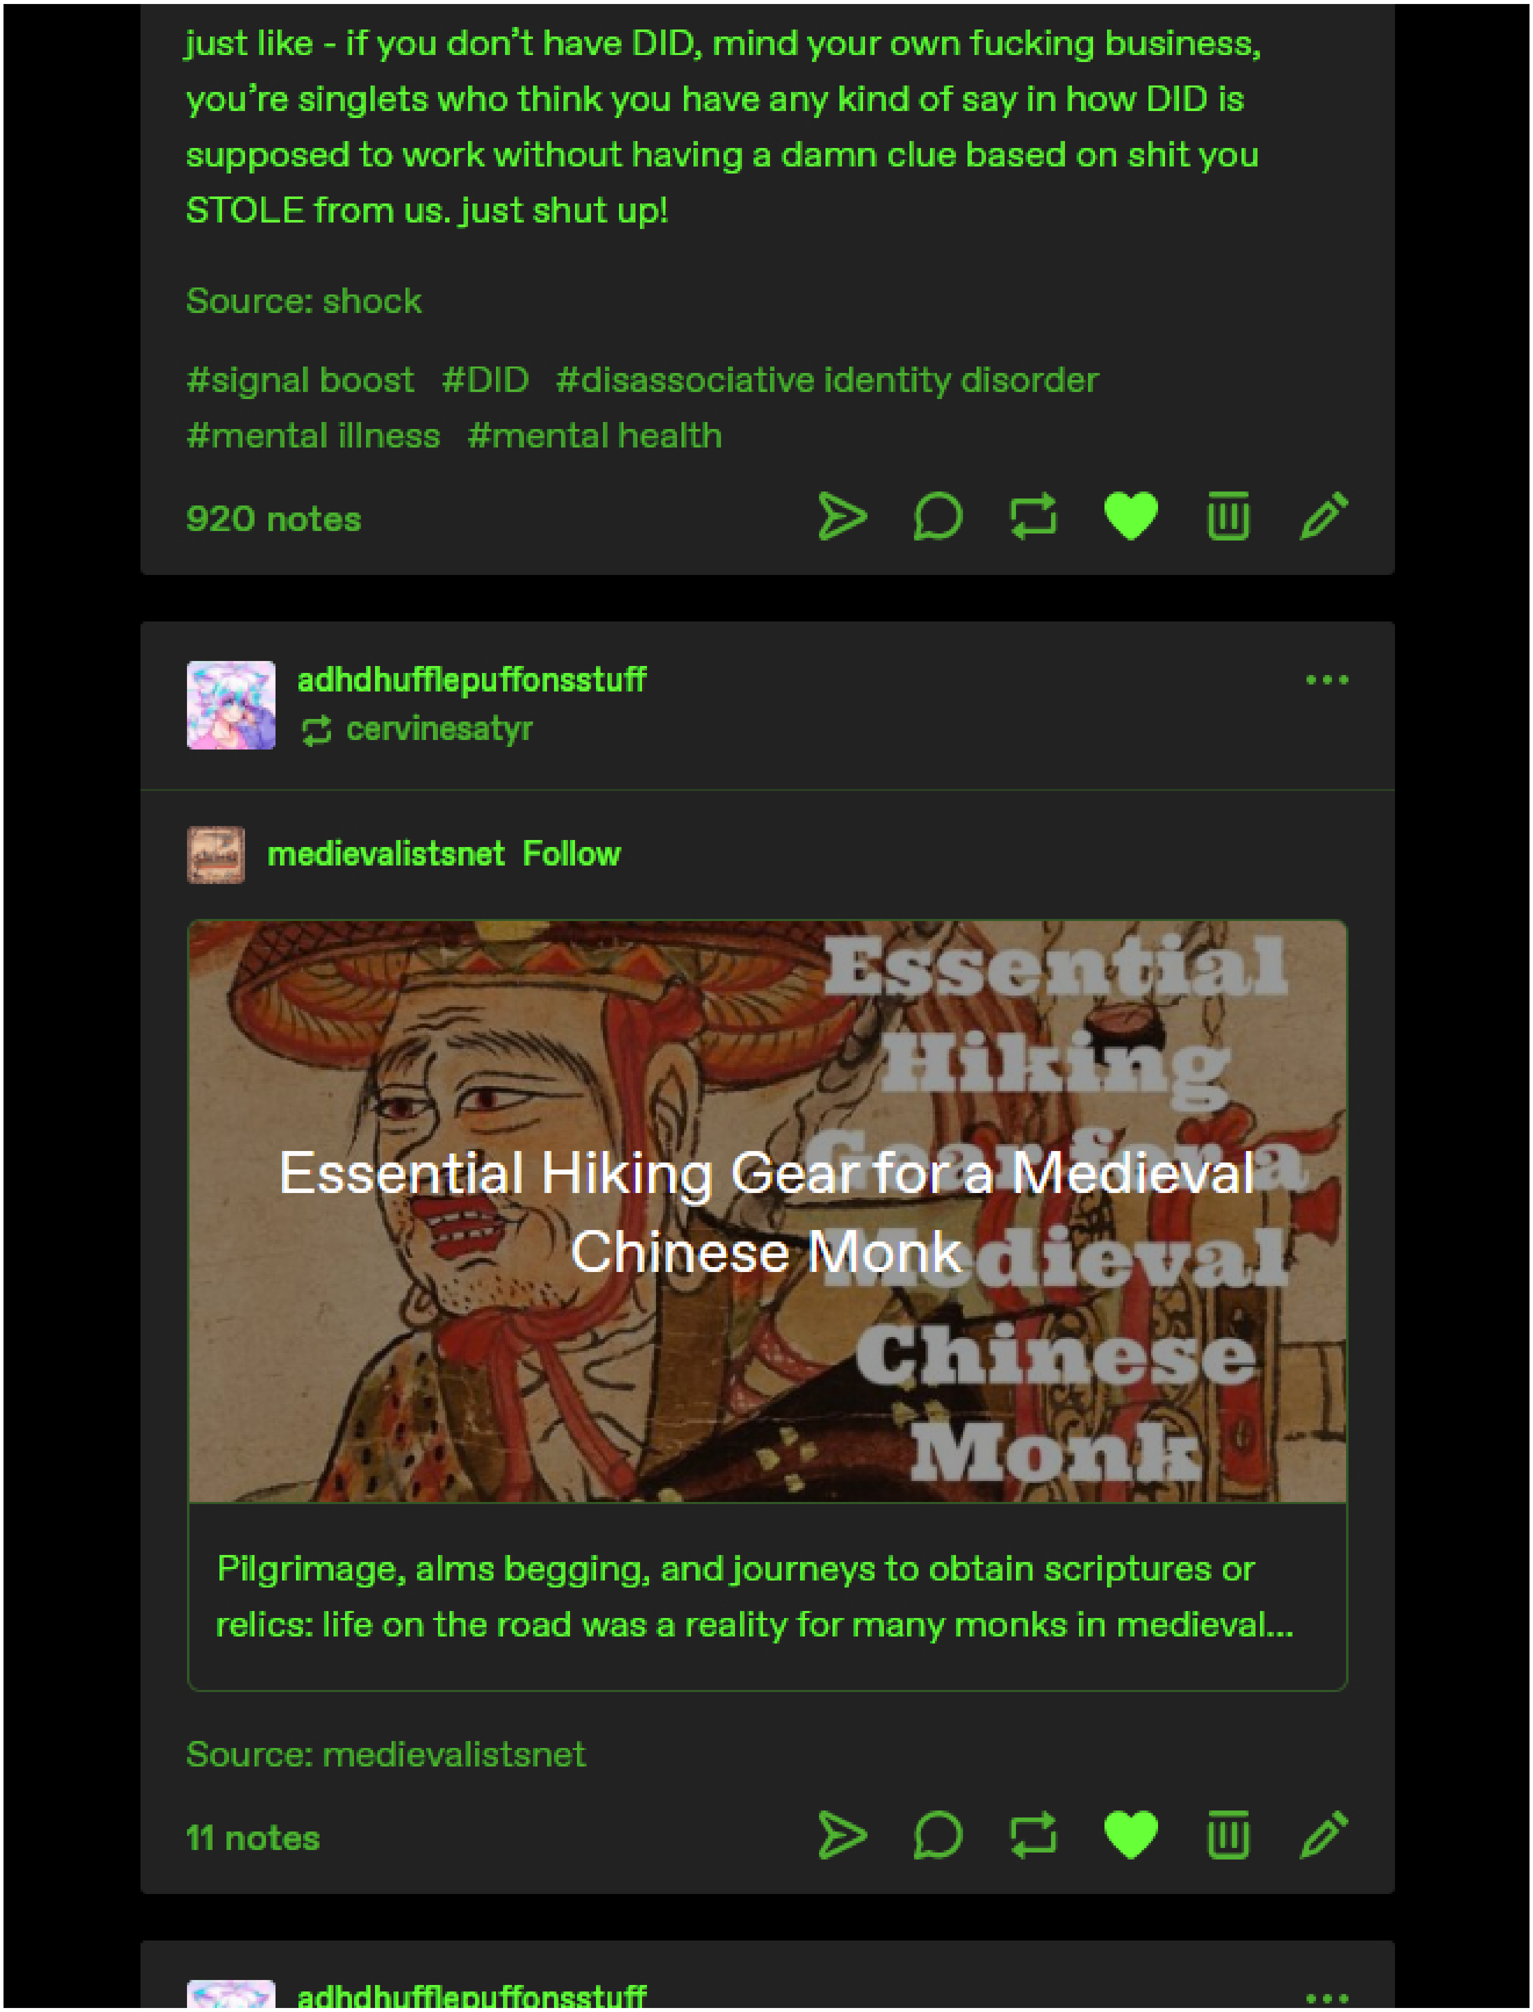
as a person with dissociative identity disorder it's so horrific the amount of our terminology that was stolen & appropriated by multiple communities to the point we can't use it anymore, especially on here

DDLG stole the term 'little', which had been a term used to describe age regressing alters that's often a tool of survival and dissociation to escape trauma, i have little alters who i keep far, far away from most interactive spaces because they are stuck in a certain frame of my life and interact with it MUCH differently... and you perverted it & turned it into a KINK. 'age sliding' came from us too.

kin people without dissociative disorders started taking switching, splitting, fronting, cofronting, fragments, turned things into 'shifting' and began simulating DID for their 'shifts' based on which kin they felt the strongest for at the time as if it made them an entirely different person depending on that. the inner world/headspace/inside - that was ours too & i can guarantee you it's much different than what you all think it is, this shit isn't like having imaginary friends or daydreaming.

and then you people started putting your discourse into our disorder, as if this disorder follows the same 'rules' as kins, as if you have any authority, as if this is a game, as if we're just having a laugh making people in our head that we love and want there, that all of us aren't REAL PEOPLE functioning in the same body, as if more than maybe only two of my alters even knows what tumblr is and what you all might be talking about, encouraging people to attempt to 'cull' their alters and force people to hurt themselves to seem more normal in the name of social justice.



just like - if you don't have DID, mind your own fucking business, you're singlets who think you have any kind of say in how DID is supposed to work without having a damn clue based on shit you STOLE from us. just shut up!

memorial to a marriage; patricia cronin

> "on july 24th, 2011- the first day that same sex marriage was legal in new york state, particia cronin and deborah kass got married. that same year the marble 'memorial to a marriage' was replaced with a bronze version. rainwater pools in the space between their two sculpted bodies, and falling leaves catch on the metal in the autumn. the two women sleep peacefully through snow and ice, and the scorching days of summer. over time the hands of cemetery visitors will wear down the bronze, burnishing it into a smooth shine. one day this will mark the final resting place of the two women. and someday people will have to remember that there was a time, long ago, when this was a memorial to a marriage that two women never thought they'd have."

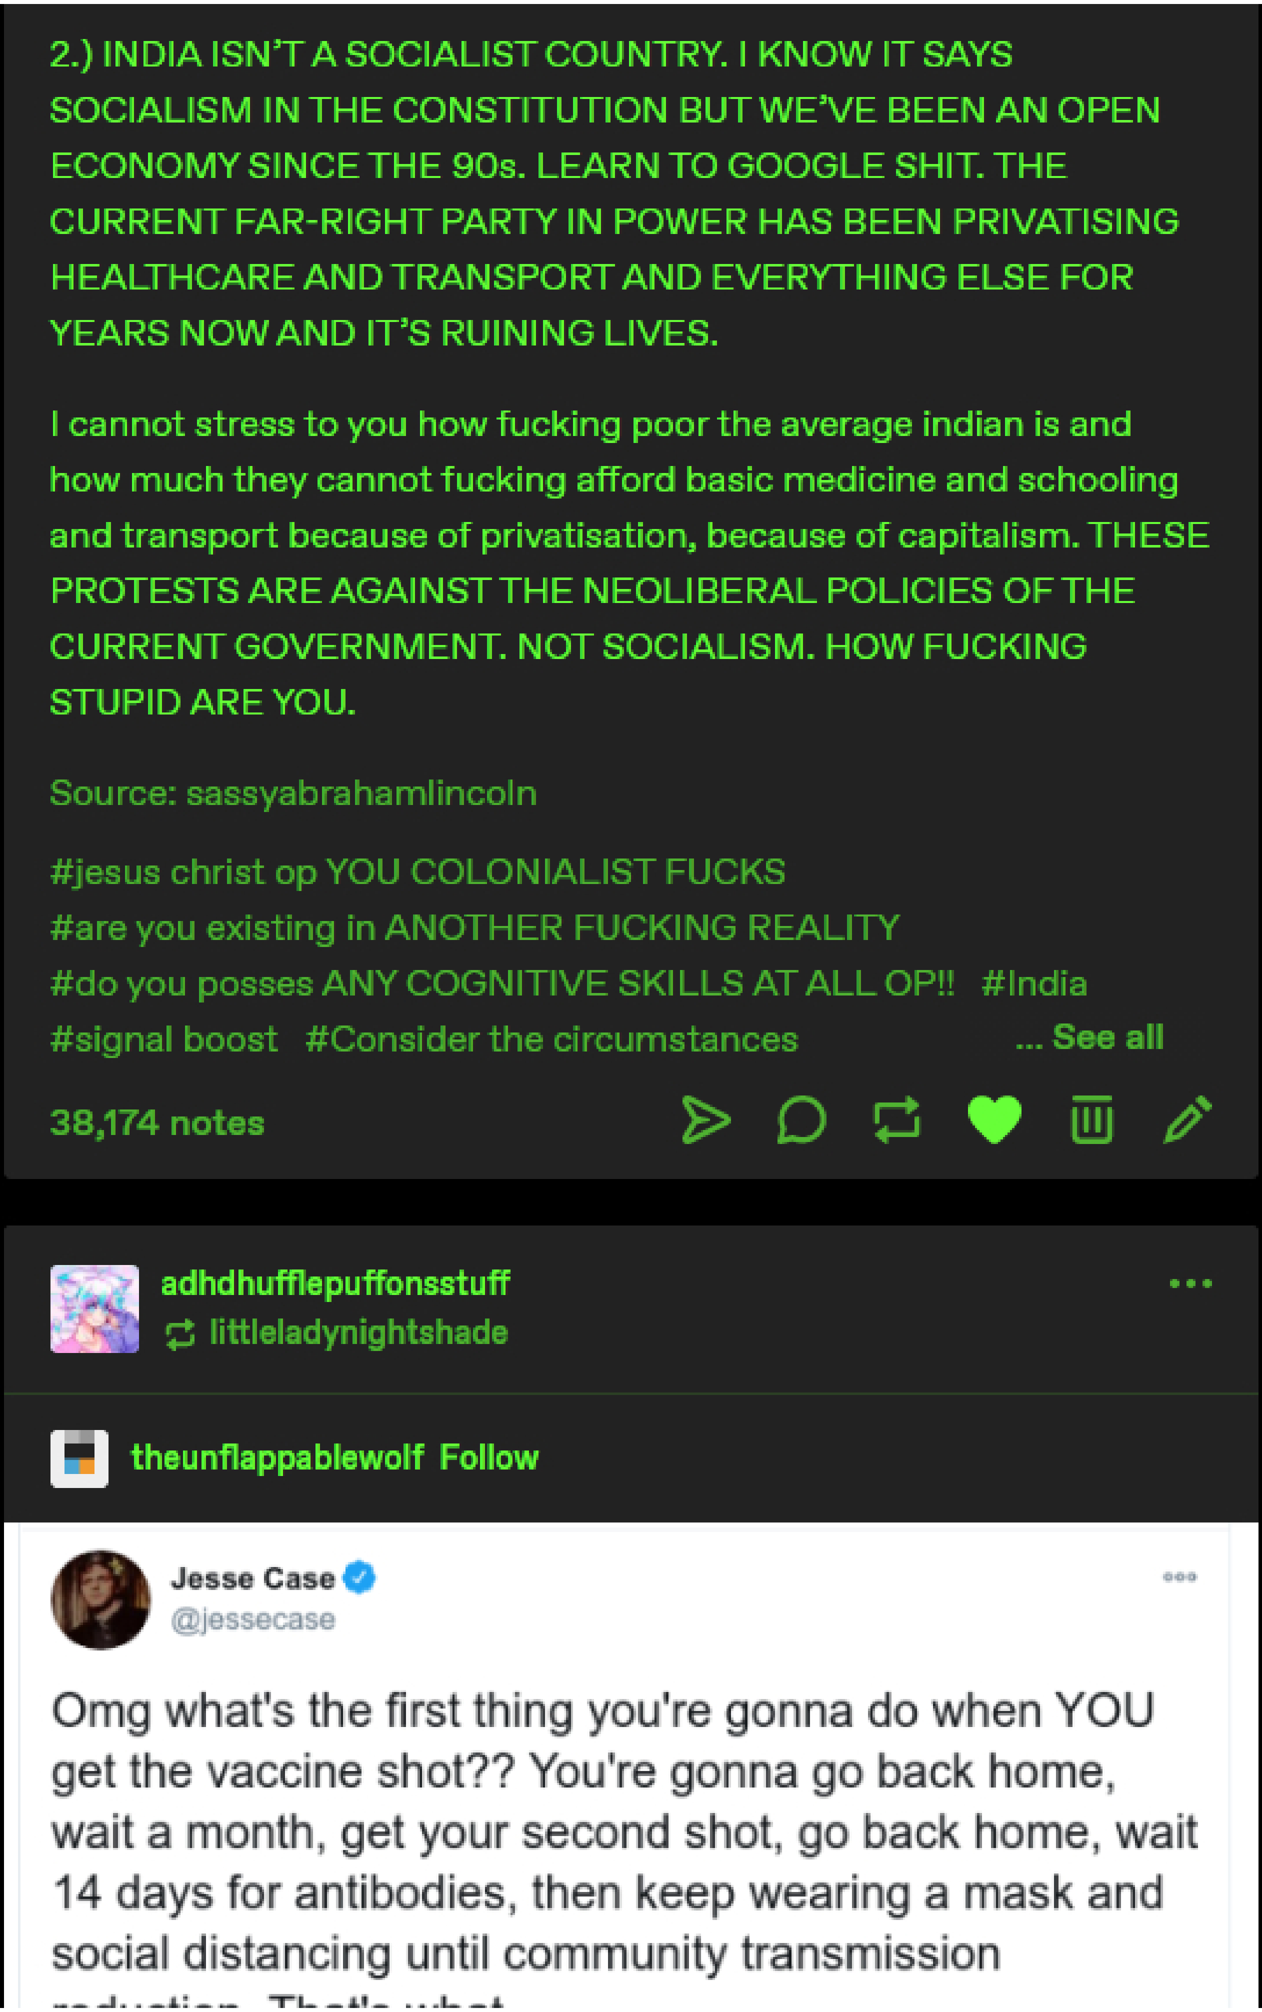
ARE ALL OF YOU FUCKING INSANE. ROTTEN LEAVES. IS THAT WHAT YOU HAVE IN YOUR HEAD. ROTTEN FUCKING LEAVES.

a few points FROM SOMEONE WHO LIVES IN INDIA.

1.) this is a drastically important protest that's being silenced in India AND abroad. it's led by farmers and wage workers because India has practically no labour protection laws. workplace injuries and deaths are extremely common. the 'minimum wage' is around $2 a DAY, in DELHI, one of most expensive places to live, AND IT'S BASICALLY NEVER FOLLOWED. the farming sector has been in crisis for decades now because the government gives zero fucks about farmers, minority farmers have no land, it's a hugely exploitative system that traps people in debt. Google it. Google farmer suicides.

DO NOT, I REPEAT, DO NOT USE THESE PROTESTS AS AN OPPORTUNITY TO GO 'HEY AMERICANS IMAGINE IF WE DID THIS'. We're real live people going through something horrific, those farmers are actual human beings experiencing brutal state-sanctioned violence. this shit should MATTER to you BEYOND a moral lesson in protesting. this is NOT a learning opportunity for first worlders! stop it! it's dehumanising and insulting! if you don't care about us beyond what we can teach you, you don't care about us, period. stop making these posts for clout.

our pain is not a goddamn parable for you to derive your leftist lessons from.



2.) INDIA ISN'T A SOCIALIST COUNTRY. I KNOW IT SAYS SOCIALISM IN THE CONSTITUTION BUT WE'VE BEEN AN OPEN ECONOMY SINCE THE 90s. LEARN TO GOOGLE SHIT. THE CURRENT FAR-RIGHT PARTY IN POWER HAS BEEN PRIVATISING HEALTHCARE AND TRANSPORT AND EVERYTHING ELSE FOR YEARS NOW AND IT'S RUINING LIVES.

I cannot stress to you how fucking poor the average indian is and how much they cannot fucking afford basic medicine and schooling and transport because of privatisation, because of capitalism. THESE PROTESTS ARE AGAINST THE NEOLIBERAL POLICIES OF THE CURRENT GOVERNMENT. NOT SOCIALISM. HOW FUCKING STUPID ARE YOU.

No Nuance November: The reason we're seeing trans kids with less dysphoria isn't that they're transtrenders; it's that as trans acceptance progresses and trans people are better represented, kids are exposed to tons of different ways to be men and women and both and neither. Like, you're less likely to think you need to have a penis to be a "real man" if you've seen tons of real men who don't living happy, authentic lives. If you aren't forced to compare yourself exclusively to cis people, you're less likely to focus exclusively on things that differentiate you from cis people and more likely to focus on what makes you feel comfortable and seen and understood.

When I explain cultural misappropriation to children, I use the example of The Nightmare Before Christmas.

It's effective because especially for children, who don't have enough historical context to understand much of the concept, you can still fully grasp the idea.

There was nothing wrong with Jack seeing the beauty and differences in Christmas town, it's when he tried to take what is unique about Christmas town away from those it originally belonged to without understanding the full context of Christmas things is when everything went wrong.

When Jack tries to get the folk of Halloween town to make Christmas gifts for children, etc., children understand that the Halloween town folk do not have the full context for the objects they are making, and they are able to see that the direct repercussions and consequences are very harmful.

what i like about this is the implication that if jack had taken the time to understand christmas town, bringing christmas to halloween town would not have been harmful. that's how it works, folks. cultural sharing is GOOD, it's only misappropriation when it's done in ignorance and disrespect.

kelseyridge13 Follow

There's an interesting level here in that Jack tried to understand Christmas town. He could see the magic while he was there, and he did try to explain it that way to citizens of Halloween town. But they weren't interested in the kind of life he was describing, so he started "rebranding" Christmas so that it was not like Christmas but was like Halloween. The people of Halloween town, never having actually encountered Christmas, have no way of knowing that what they're being told about Christmas and "Sandy Claws" is inaccurate. Jack also tried to study Christmas and its culture, though he couldn't quite get it; eventually, he literally decides to take it for himself, even as he knows it's not really for him. He started out feeling sad the others in Halloween town didn't 'get it,' but he then decided it's not important to fully 'get it' but instead to have it.

So it's not just accidentally removing things form their context; he has intentionally disregard the meaning of the rituals he purports to be recreating, making them more fun for the recreaters but not like what the rituals are supposed to be and without the related significance.

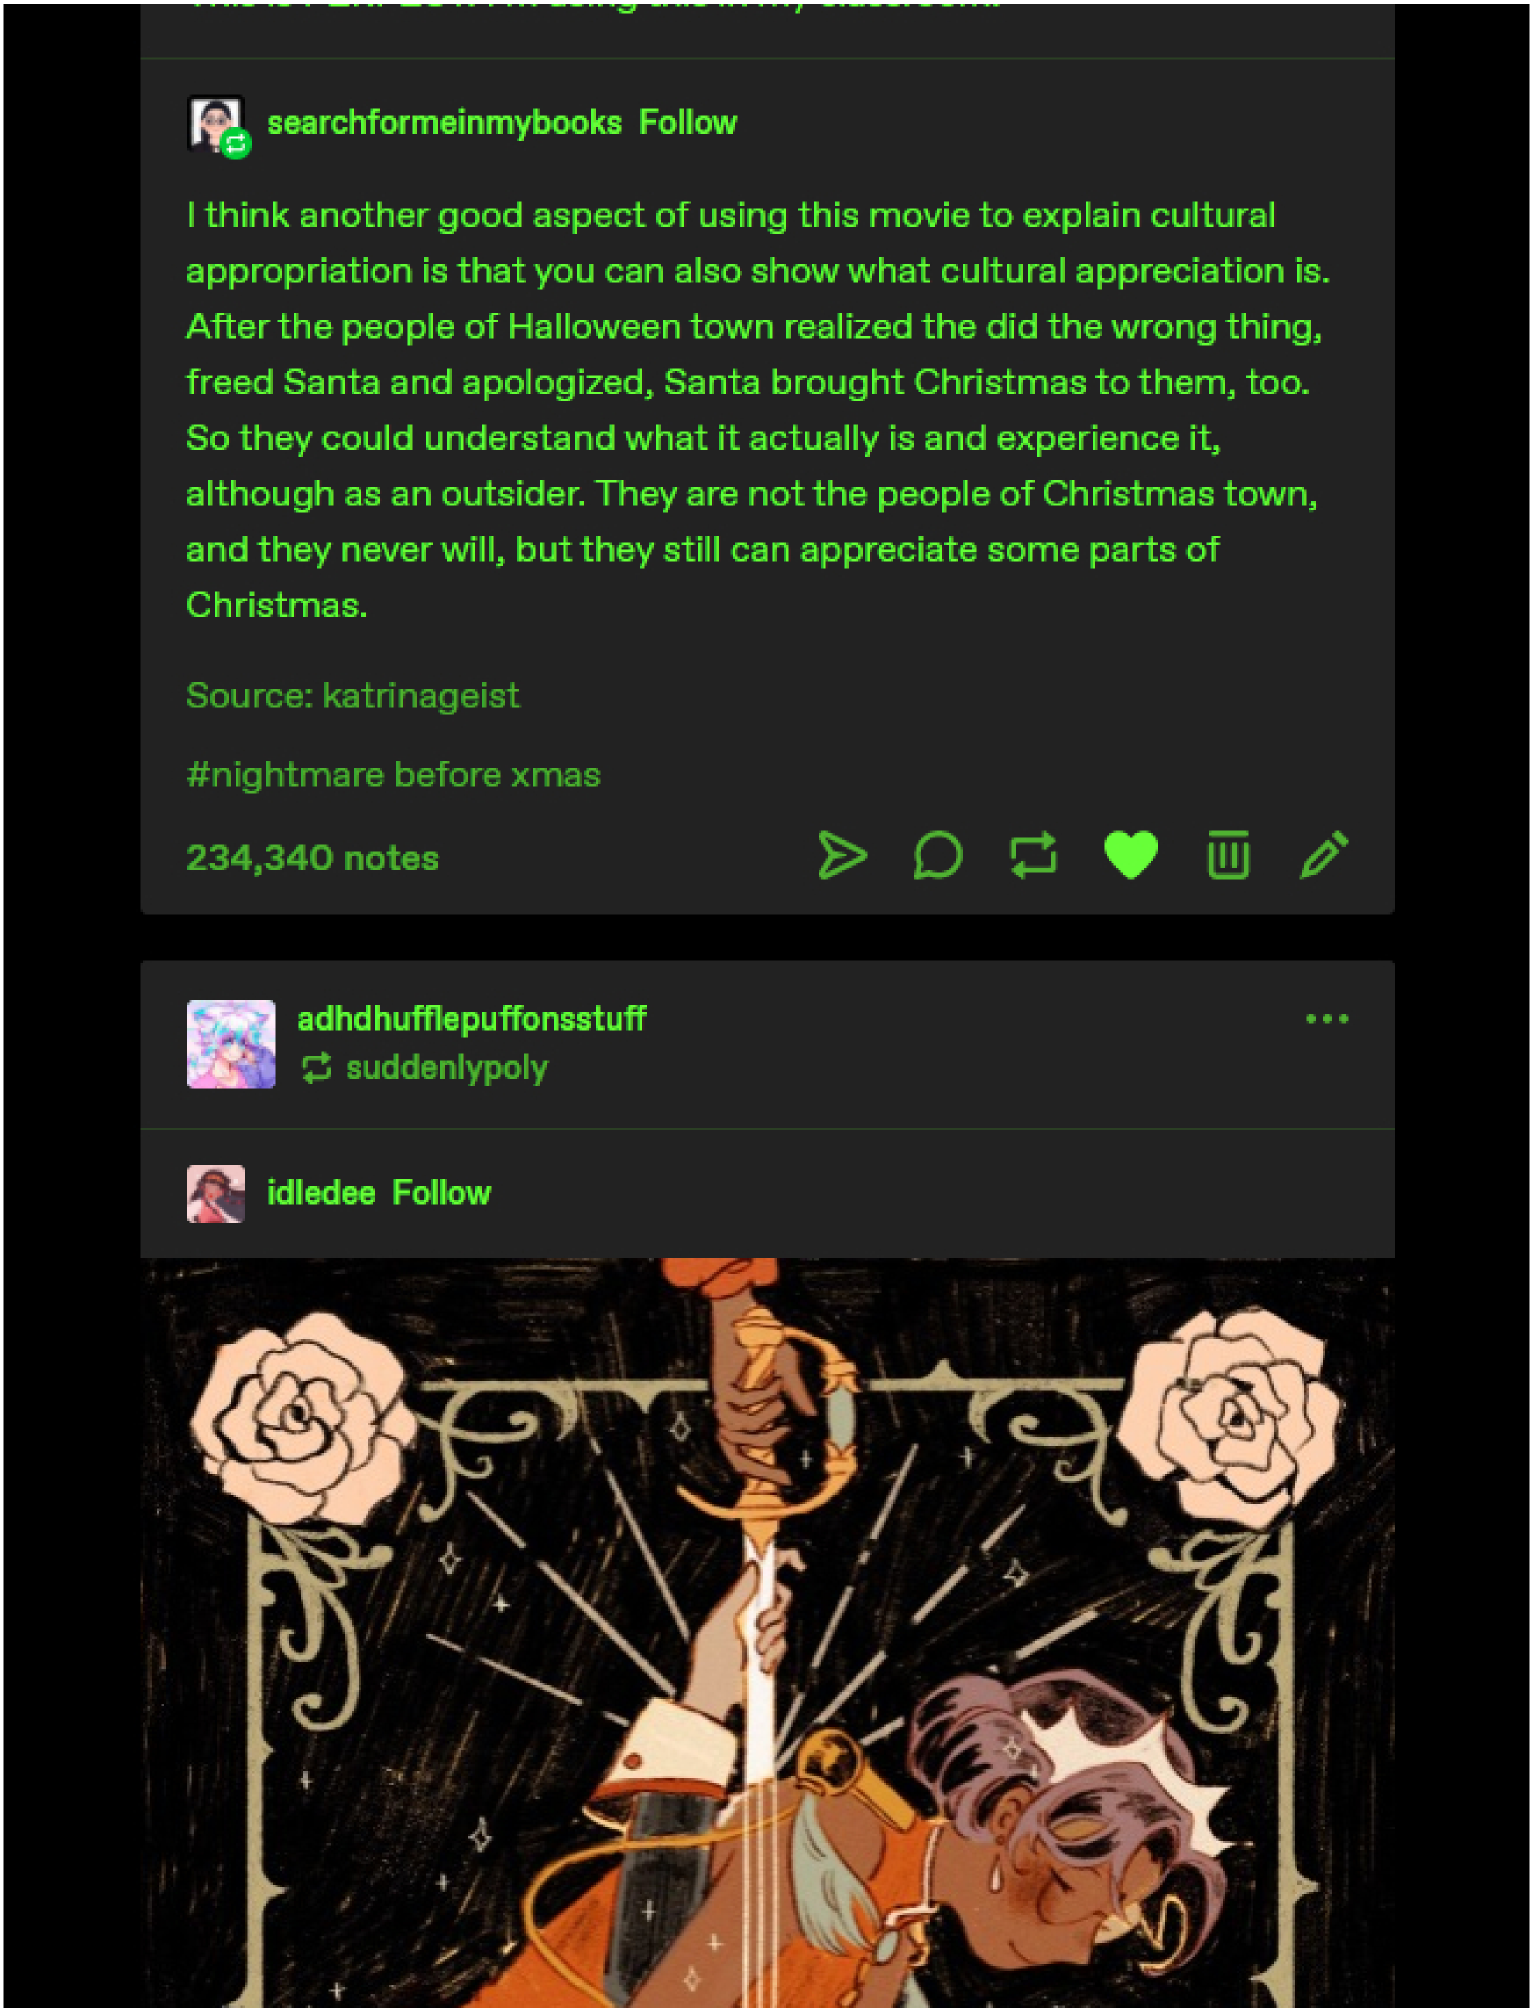
This is the best way to conceptualize the wrong way to share culture I have ever seen and I think I finally get where people are coming from when they talk about "cultural appropriation."

anukii

This is an EXCELLENT explanation through example!

figureyourlifeout

This is PERFECT. I'm using this in my classroom.



searchformeinmybooks Follow

I think another good aspect of using this movie to explain cultural appropriation is that you can also show what cultural appreciation is. After the people of Halloween town realized the did the wrong thing, freed Santa and apologized, Santa brought Christmas to them, too. So they could understand what it actually is and experience it, although as an outsider. They are not the people of Christmas town, and they never will, but they still can appreciate some parts of Christmas.

Supernatural had the opportunity to do something great. To send a message of love and validation to a whole community. Not only to the part of the community that liked their show, but to all of us. But instead they decided to pander to the people, who never had to fight for their representation.

I support #TheySilencedYou, #TheySilencedThem and #TheyWillNeverSilenceUs and I'm in awe of all of you. Of your eloquence, passion, coordination and decisiveness. And I feel like your message goes beyond this particular TV show and the CW.

It's about protesting a pattern of disrespect towards otherness in Mainstream Media. It's about demanding meaningful, unmistakably queer representation, that enables discourse and furthers understanding in a heterogenic Audience. It's about asking Networks to not only hire diverse staff but to also give them the freedom to tell their stories the way they want to. It's about telling creators to own up to the inherent messages they leave us with in the end.

And that's inspiring and should be celebrated.

Stories matter.

8.	Espresso (E)	Short cup. Pull shot(s) directly into cup then serve.
9.	Espresso Macchiato (EM)	Short cup. Pour 2% into first pitcher line, aerate for 3-5 seconds, pull shots into cup, spoon a dollop of foam onto shots.
10.	Flavored Frappuccinos (!)	While essentially all frappuccinos follow the same formula, it's important to note that if someone asks for a frappucino with a flavor from the hot bar, you must use HALF the syrup pumps. For example, a cinnamon dolce frappuccino would use 1/2/2 cinnamon dolce pumps instead of 2/3/4. Frappuccino roast/base pumps would remain unchanged, however.
11.	Frappuccino Light (normal acronym + L at the end, ie CRFL)	If someone asks for a light version of a frappucino, it means using skim milk instead of whole, the light frappucino base and not putting on any whip. Otherwise exact same formula.
12.	Grande Americano (A)	3 shots, hot water
13.	Grande Cappuccino (C) (!)	2% to third line on pitcher, aerate 6-8 seconds, 2 shots, MUST FREE POUR MILK. Ideally 50/50 milk to foam ratio. If dry cappuccino is requested aerate longer, if wet cappuccino requested aerate less.
14.	Grande Caramel Apple Spice (CAS)	Pour APPLE JUICE to third line on pitcher, steam, 4 pumps of cinnamon dolce syrup into cup, pour apple juice, top with whip and caramel drizzle.
15.	Grande Coffee Frappuccino (CF)	3 pumps frappuccino roast into grande cold cup. Whole milk to bottom line of cup. Pour into blender pitcher. Grande scoop of ice (third ice scoop from the top), 3 pumps frappuccino base. Put on pitcher lid, put in blender, hit button #1. Once done blending, pour back into original cup and serve. This is the most basic Frappuccino, however all grande frappuccinos follow this basic formula.
16.	Grande Cold Lattes	4 pumps of syrup (if applicable) into cold cup, 2 shots into cup, 2% to top line of cup, rest ice.
17.	Grande Flat White (FW) (!)	WHOLE MILK to third line on pitcher, aerate 2-3 seconds, 3 RISTRETTO SHOTS, free pour into cup and hopefully end with something like a white foam dot in your drink. Requires practice to perfect.
18.	Grande Hot Caramel Macchiato (CM) (!)	Pour 2% to second line on pitcher, aerate 3-5 seconds, pull 2 shots into shot glasses, THREE pumps VANILLA into cup, fill cup 3/4 full with milk BEFORE the the espresso, pour shots on onto milk, top with caramel drizzle.
19.	Grande Hot Chocolate (HC)	Pour 2% into third line on pitcher, aerate 3-5 seconds, 4 pumps of mocha and ONE of vanilla into cup, pour milk and top with whip and mocha drizzle.
20.	Grande Hot Flavored Latte	2% to second line on pitcher, aerate 3-5 seconds, 4 pumps of specified syrup into cup, 2 shots into cup, pour milk and top with foam.

Hey, guys, some of the things in here are for making frappuccinos, and call for things like frappuccino roast and coffee/cream base, but if you're making these at home, you can do substitution easy. Frappuccino roast you can make with cooled down double roasted coffee, meaning you make a pot of coffee with twice the amount of ground coffee or half the amount of water. For the base, you

this is way more helpful to people with what each pump equals or what "to the second line" equals in actual measurements not starbucks measurements so employees and ex employees add ur personal guidelines for syrup pumps, I'd say each one roughly equals a tablespoon if you cant get a hand on pumps. the 2/3/4 is referring to pumps per size.

short = 8 oz = 2 pumps (tablespoons) can basically substitute maple syrup or honey, just depending on flavor preference, it's really just a thickener or binder, you can also sub in heavy whipping cream instead of whole milk to really get that thick, smooth flavor.

of syrup. tall = 12 oz = 3. grande, 16 oz, 4. venti, 20 oz, 5. iced venti, 24 oz, 6. trenta, 30 oz, 7.

one tablespoon is .5oz and one espresso shot is 1oz, dont include ice weight for iced drinks

Found these when going through the notes, so unashamedly reblogging.

joe biden's resumé, in order of importance:

1. caused fall out boy
2. 46th president of the united states of america

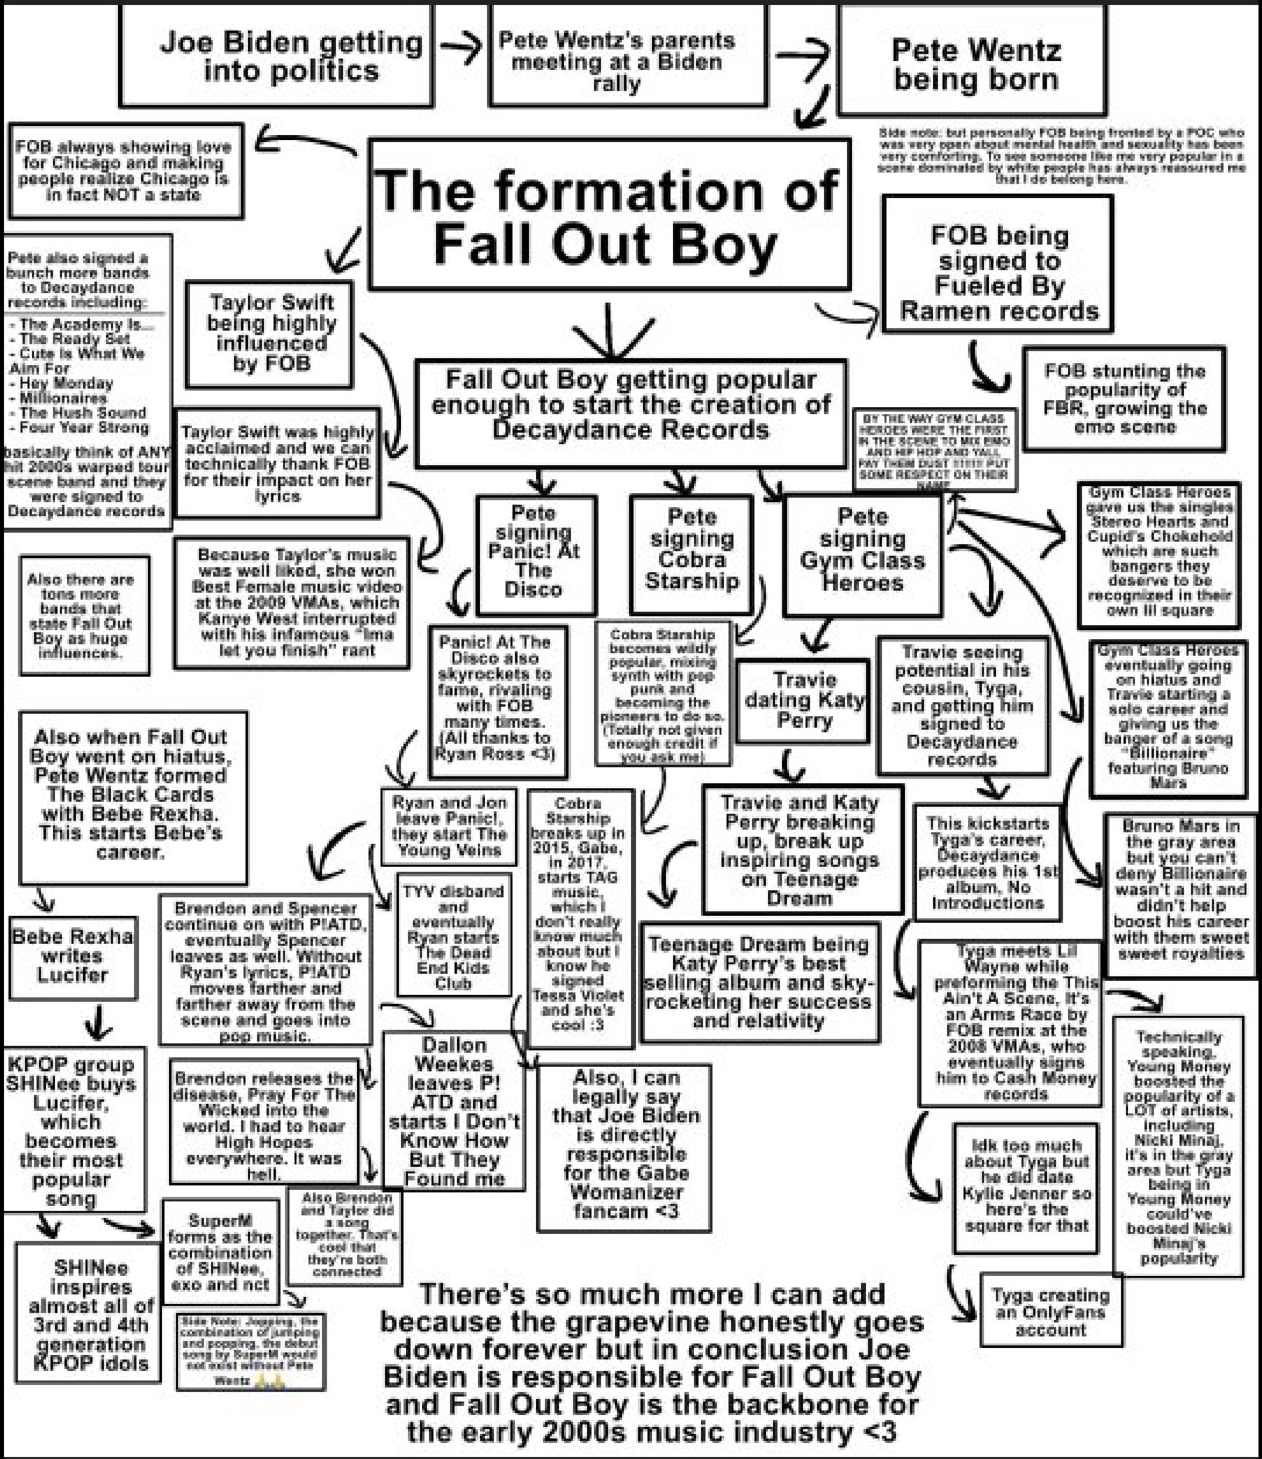
softyreid Follow

the first time i ever heard about biden "causing" fob was in a tik tok and for some reason my immediate thought was that mr joseph biden himself told these motherfuckers to start a band, pep talk and everything. and then my second thought was maybe he had some connection with a record label, and called them up like "yeah, man, got this great band, great group of kids"

it never crossed my mind that pete wentz's parents met at a fucking biden campaign

tigerteeff Follow

and it continues btw



Joe Biden getting into politics

Pete Wentz's parents meeting at a Biden rally

Pete Wentz being born

Side note: but personally FOB being fronted by a POC who was very open about mental health and sexuality has been very comforting. To see someone like me very popular in a scene dominated by white people has always reassured me that I do belong here.

The formation of Fall Out Boy

FOB always showing love for Chicago and making people realize Chicago is in fact NOT a state

FOB being signed to Fueled By Ramen records

FOB stunting the popularity of FBR, growing the emo scene

Pete also signed a bunch more bands to Decaydance records including:

- The Academy Is...
- The Ready Set
- Cute Is What We Aim For
- Hey Monday
- Millionaires
- The Hush Sound
- Four Year Strong

basically think of ANY hit 2000s warped tour scene band and they were signed to Decaydance records

Taylor Swift being highly influenced by FOB

Taylor Swift was highly acclaimed and we can technically thank FOB for their impact on her lyrics

Because Taylor's music was well liked, she won Best Female music video at the 2009 VMAs, which Kanye West interrupted with his infamous "Ima let you finish" rant

Also there are tons more bands that state Fall Out Boy as huge influences.

Fall Out Boy getting popular enough to start the creation of Decaydance Records

BY THE WAY GYM CLASS HEROES WERE THE FIRST IN THE SCENE TO MIX EMO AND HIP HOP AND YALL PAY THEM DUST !!!!!! PUT SOME RESPECT ON THEIR NAME

Pete signing Panic! At The Disco

Pete signing Cobra Starship

Pete signing Gym Class Heroes

Gym Class Heroes gave us the singles Stereo Hearts and Cupid's Chokehold which are such bangers they deserve to be recognized in their own lil square

Gym Class Heroes eventually going on hiatus and Travie starting a solo career and giving us the banger of a song "Billionaire" featuring Bruno Mars

Bruno Mars in the gray area but you can't deny Billionaire wasn't a hit and didn't help boost his career with them sweet sweet royalties

Panic! At The Disco also skyrockets to fame, rivaling with FOB many times. (All thanks to Ryan Ross <3)

Cobra Starship becomes wildly popular, mixing synth with pop punk and becoming the pioneers to do so. (Totally not given enough credit if you ask me)

Travie dating Katy Perry

Travie seeing potential in his cousin, Tyga, and getting him signed to Decaydance records

Also when Fall Out Boy went on hiatus, Pete Wentz formed The Black Cards with Bebe Rexha. This starts Bebe's career.

Ryan and Jon leave Panic!, they start The Young Veins

Cobra Starship breaks up in 2015, Gabe, in 2017, starts TAG music, which I don't really know much about but I know he signed Tessa Violet and she's cool :3

Travie and Katy Perry breaking up, break up inspiring songs on Teenage Dream

This kickstarts Tyga's career, Decaydance produces his 1st album, No Introductions

Bebe Rexha writes Lucifer

Brendon and Spencer continue on with P!ATD, eventually Spencer leaves as well. Without Ryan's lyrics, P!ATD moves farther and farther away from the scene and goes into pop music.

TYV disband and eventually Ryan starts The Dead End Kids Club

Teenage Dream being Katy Perry's best selling album and sky-rocketing her success and relativity

Tyga meets Lil Wayne while preforming the This Ain't A Scene, It's an Arms Race by FOB remix at the 2008 VMAs, who eventually signs him to Cash Money records

Technically speaking, Young Money boosted the popularity of a LOT of artists, including Nicki Minaj, it's in the gray area but Tyga being in Young Money could've boosted Nicki Minaj's popularity

KPOP group SHINee buys Lucifer, which becomes their most popular song

Brendon releases the disease, Pray For The Wicked into the world. I had to hear High Hopes everywhere. It was hell.

Dallon Weekes leaves P! ATD and starts I Don't Know How But They Found me

Also, I can legally say that Joe Biden is directly responsible for the Gabe Womanizer fancam <3

Idk too much about Tyga but he did date Kylie Jenner so here's the square for that

Also Brendon and Taylor did a song together. That's cool that they're both connected

SHINee inspires almost all of 3rd and 4th generation KPOP idols

SuperM forms as the combination of SHINee, exo and nct

Side Note: Jopping, the combination of jumping and popping, the debut song by SuperM would not exist without Pete Wentz 🙏🙏

Tyga creating an OnlyFans account

John Pilger Documentary - Palestine Is Still the Issue

Almost 30 years apart, John Pilger's two documentaries about Palestine carried the same title, Palestine is Still the Issue. His point was that, in the course of a generation, a great injustice remained unchanged and urgent.

His 1974 film described the flight and expulsion of almost a million Palestinians, who became refugees in their own land – at the creation of the state of Israel in 1948, then as a result of the Six Day War in 1967.

'What has changed,' says Pilger on his return to film his 2002 documentary, 'is that the Palestinians have fought back. Stateless and humiliated for so long, they have risen up against Israel's huge military regime, although they themselves have no army, no tanks, no American planes and gunships or missiles... For [them], the overriding, routine of terror, day after day, has been the ruthless overriding, routine of terror, day after day, has been the ruthless control of almost every aspect of their lives, as if they live in an open prison.'

One of the most telling voices is that of a soldier, Yishai Rosen-Zvi, who has refused to serve on the occupied West Bank and describes 'the huge bluff of the Israeli establishment', adding, '[Every] criticism of its policies is called anti-Semitism, [when] criticising your country's policy is the only patriotic thing that one can do.'

His words are prophetic. An orchestrated Zionist-run campaign was mounted against Palestine is Still the Issue, mainly in the United States by groups who had not seen the film. Each email they sent had a generic theme of 'anti-Semitism' – an early version of social media 'bots'. Pilger and his family received death threats.

In Britain, the Independent Television Commission, then the regulator for commercial TV, conducted a three-month inquiry and concluded that Palestine is Still the Issue was 'fair and balanced' and had not breached the 'due impartiality' clause in the 1990 Broadcasting Act. It praised the film's historical accuracy, together with the 'care and thoroughness with which it was researched'. Palestine is Still the Issue won a number of international awards.

Awards: The Chris Statuette in the War & Peace division, Chris Awards, Columbus International Film & Video Festival, Ohio, 2003; Winner, War & Peace category, Vermont International Film Festival, 2003; Certificate of Merit, Chicago International Television Awards.

Palestine Is Still The Issue was a Carlton Television production for ITV first broadcast on ITV1, 16 September 2002

Do not stop sharing her story

Breonna Taylor was an EMT first responder in Louisville, KY. On March 13th, the Louisville Metro Police executed a no-knock warrant looking for drugs they never found, reportedly trafficked by a person who did not live with Breonna or in her complex and whom they already had in custody.

Breonna was asleep at her home when the Louisville police officers sprayed her home with 20 rounds shooting Breonna 8 times, killing her in her bed. She deserves justice!

Random personality test from Russia!

I want you to answer quickly. Now, think of one animal that you would want to be. Just the first animal (or bird or fish) you think of. Keep that animal in mind.

Now let's pretend that animal doesn't exist, what animal whould you wanna be? Keep it in mind.

Now let's pretend that animal doesn't exist either. What animal whould you be? Now you should have three animals in mind.

Results:

The first animal that you picked is how you wanna appear to people. For example if you picked a lion or a tiger you wanna appear strong and independent.

The second animal is how people actually see you. For example if you choose a dog people see you as loyal and friendly and cute.

The third animal is who you actually are.

Mine are: Cat, Owl, and Fox.

And what animals did you choose 😉

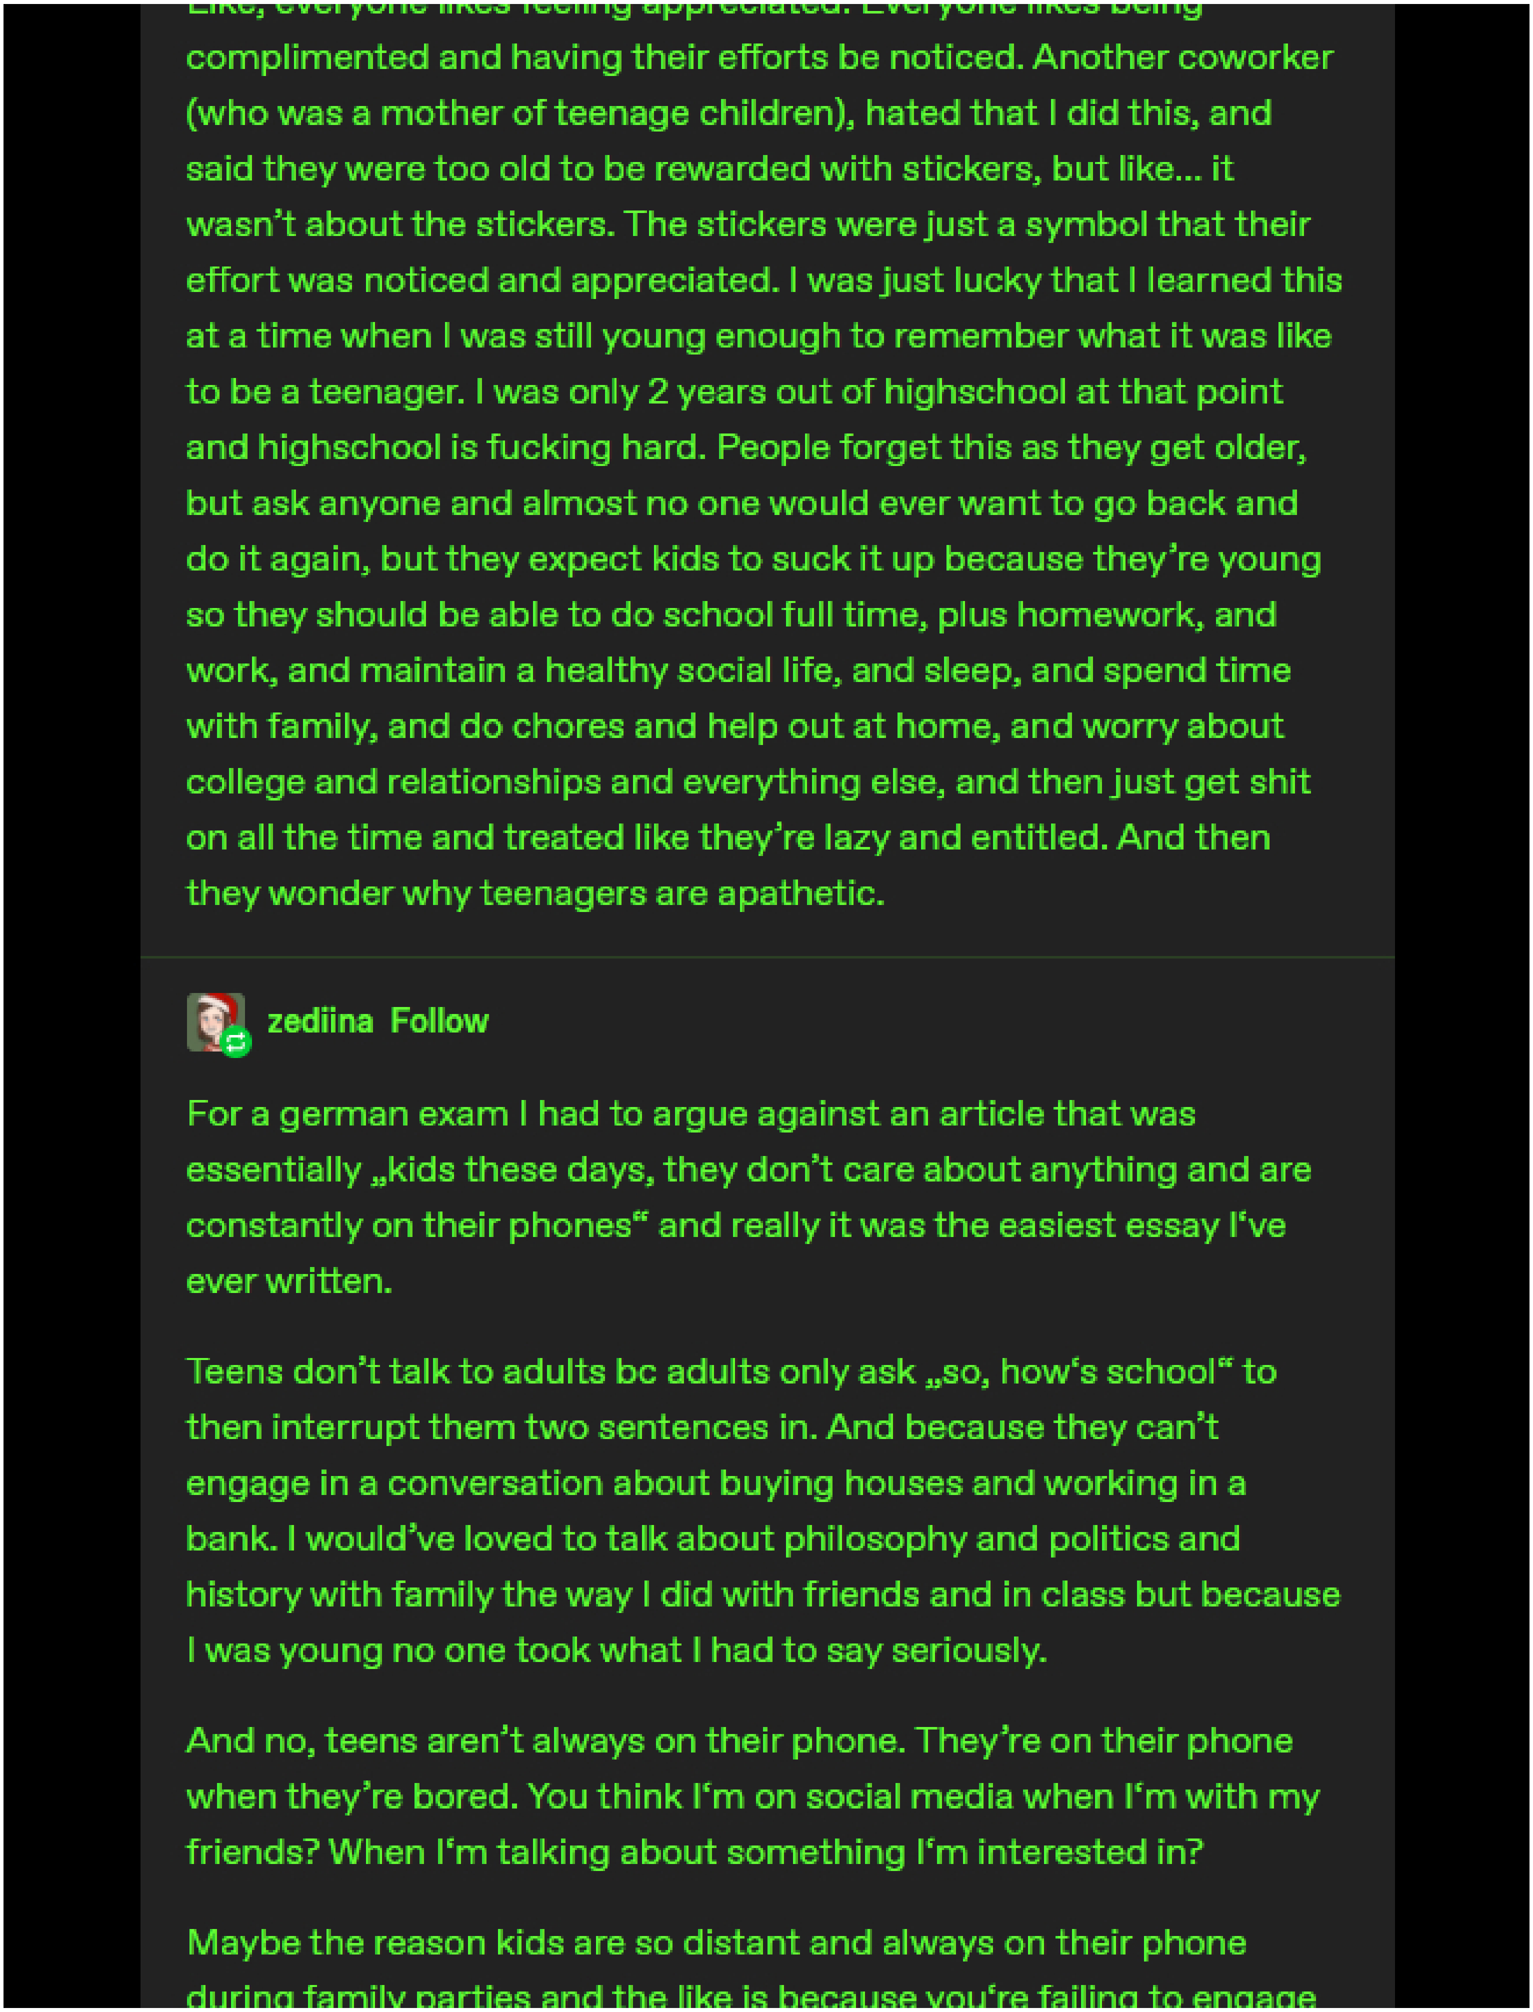
I remember once, when I was in my early 20s, I was an afternoon supervisor at my job, and I worked with mostly teenagers, and the one day this one kid, who was like 15, was bored so I suggested he could clean out the fridge. He did and when he was done I said he did a good job.

After that, this kid was cleaning out the fridge at least once a week, and I was like, "why are you always cleaning the fridge?" Like, I didn't mind, but it seemed odd. And he said, "one time I cleaned the fridge and you said I did a good job. I wanted to make you proud of me again."

Literally, I changed the entire way I interacted with teenagers after that. I actually got a package of glitter stars and I would stick them on their nametags when they did a good job, and they loved it.

My manager had commented on how hard these kids work and I said, "they're starved for positive feedback. They go to school all day then come to work all evening and no one appreciates it because it's expected of them, but they're still kids. They need positive feedback from adults in their lives."

Like, everyone likes feeling appreciated. Everyone likes being



Like, everyone likes feeling appreciated. Everyone likes being complimented and having their efforts be noticed. Another coworker (who was a mother of teenage children), hated that I did this, and said they were too old to be rewarded with stickers, but like... it wasn't about the stickers. The stickers were just a symbol that their effort was noticed and appreciated. I was just lucky that I learned this at a time when I was still young enough to remember what it was like to be a teenager. I was only 2 years out of highschool at that point and highschool is fucking hard. People forget this as they get older, but ask anyone and almost no one would ever want to go back and do it again, but they expect kids to suck it up because they're young so they should be able to do school full time, plus homework, and work, and maintain a healthy social life, and sleep, and spend time with family, and do chores and help out at home, and worry about college and relationships and everything else, and then just get shit on all the time and treated like they're lazy and entitled. And then they wonder why teenagers are apathetic.

zediina Follow

For a german exam I had to argue against an article that was essentially „kids these days, they don't care about anything and are constantly on their phones“ and really it was the easiest essay I‘ve ever written.

Teens don't talk to adults bc adults only ask „so, how‘s school“ to then interrupt them two sentences in. And because they can't engage in a conversation about buying houses and working in a bank. I would've loved to talk about philosophy and politics and history with family the way I did with friends and in class but because I was young no one took what I had to say seriously.

And no, teens aren't always on their phone. They're on their phone when they're bored. You think I‘m on social media when I‘m with my friends? When I‘m talking about something I‘m interested in?

Maybe the reason kids are so distant and always on their phone during family parties and the like is because you‘re failing to engage and include them.

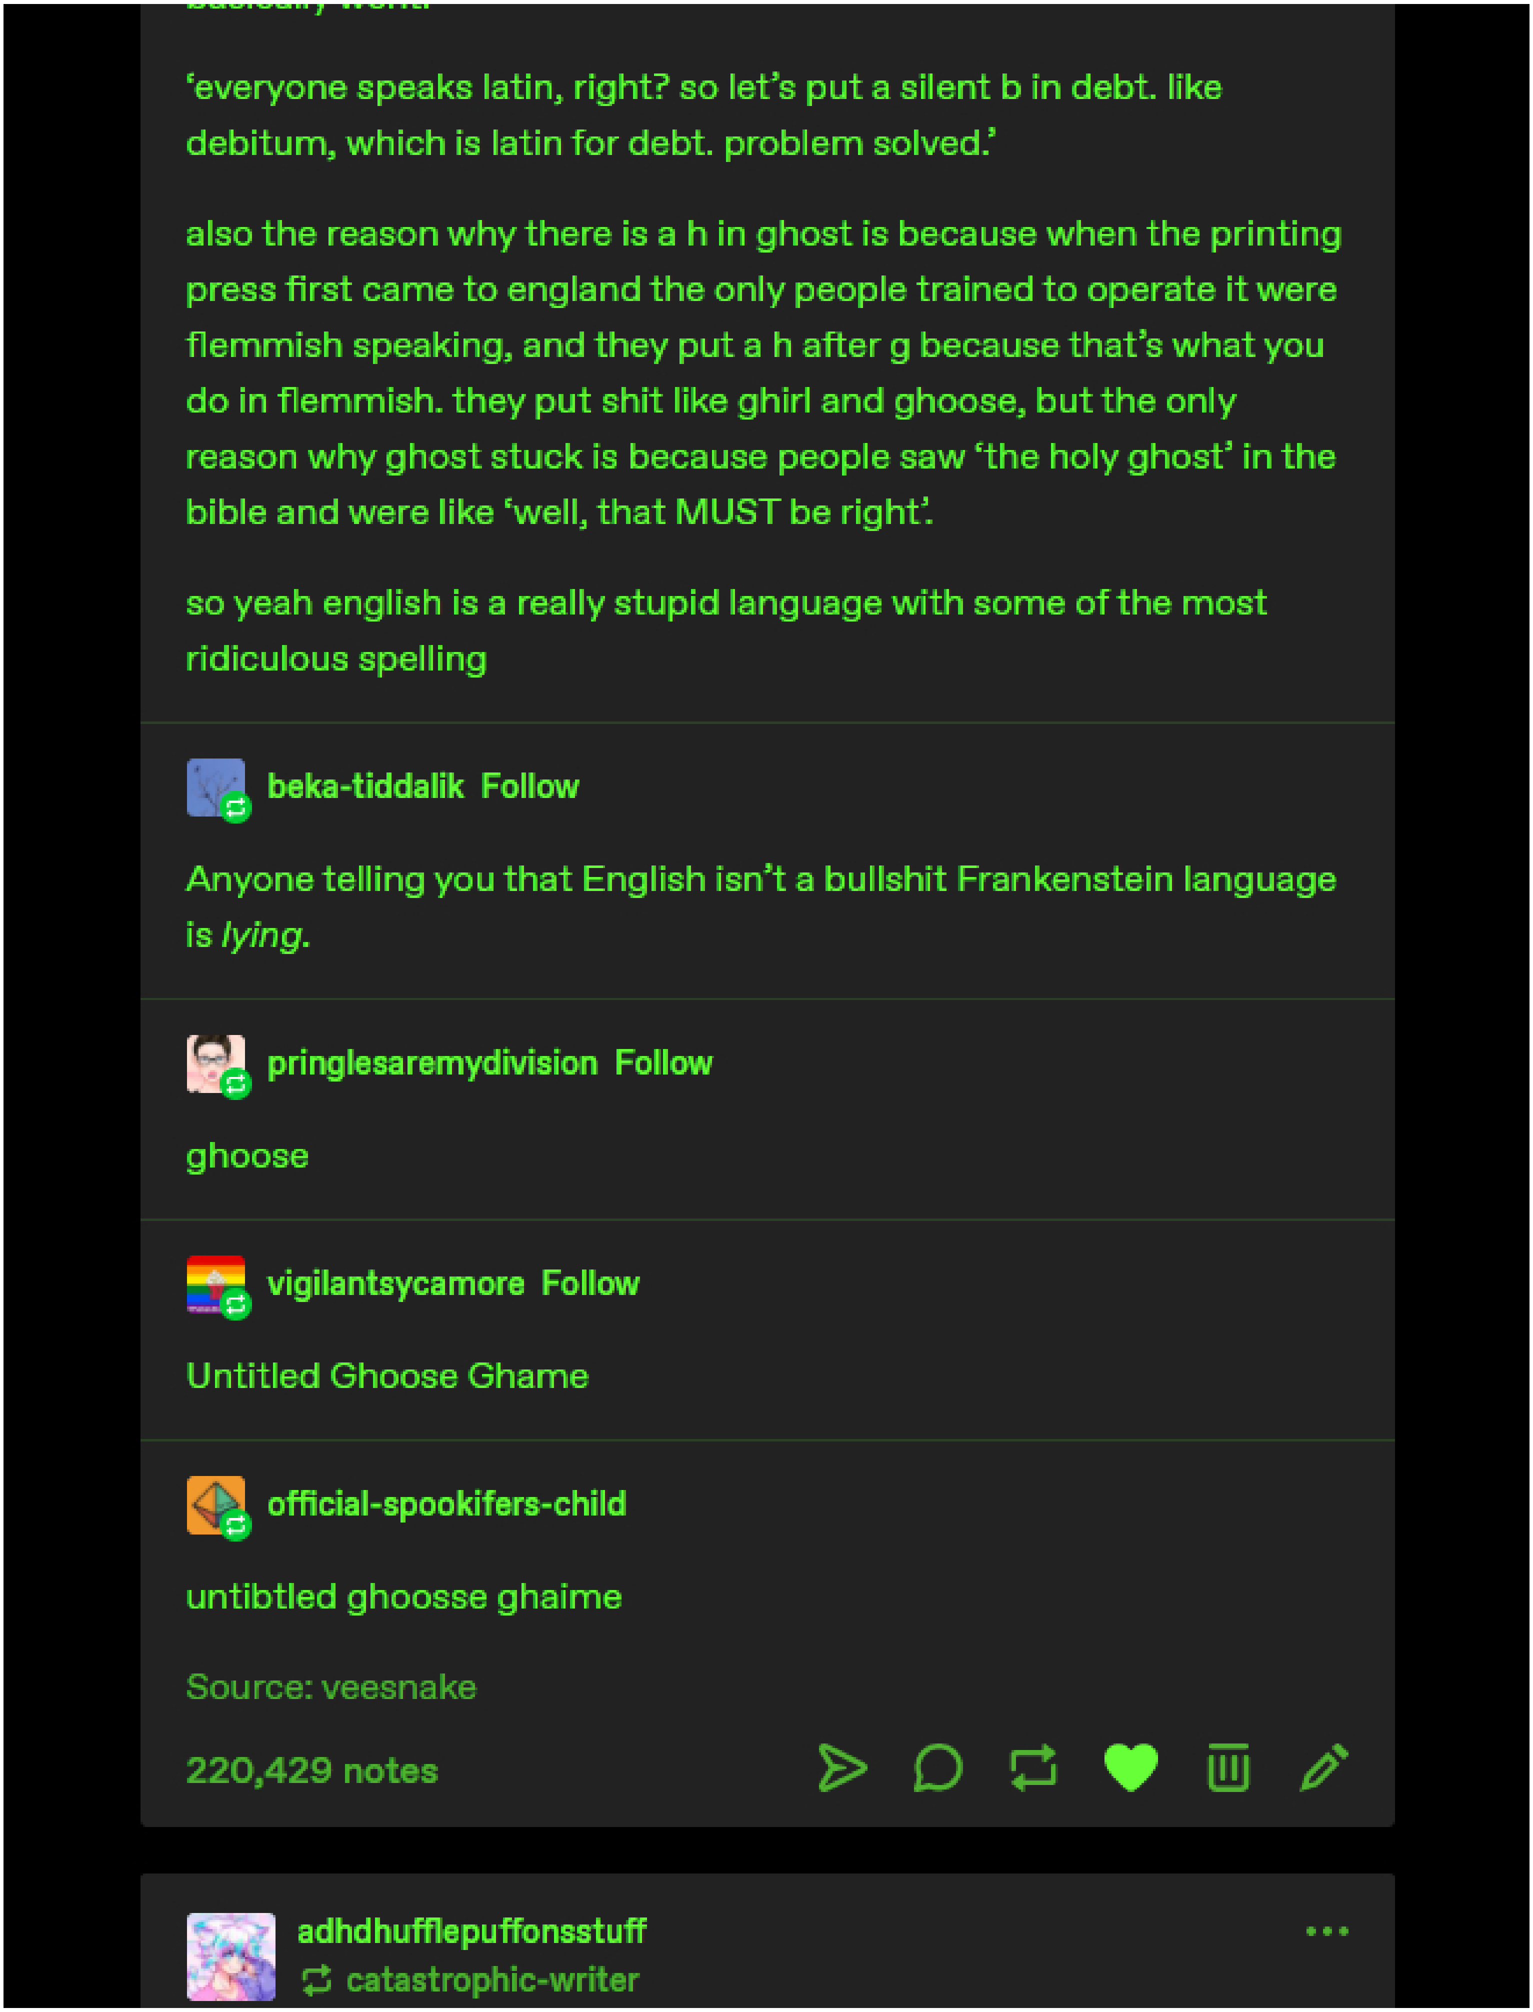
if anyone ever tells you that english isn't ridiculous remember that the reason why we have a silent b in debt is because a group of guys got together to standardise english spelling and got to the word debt, which at the time was primarily spelled either 'dett' or 'det'. so they basically went:



‘everyone speaks latin, right? so let’s put a silent b in debt. like debitum, which is latin for debt. problem solved.’

also the reason why there is a h in ghost is because when the printing press first came to england the only people trained to operate it were flemmish speaking, and they put a h after g because that’s what you do in flemmish. they put shit like ghirl and ghoose, but the only reason why ghost stuck is because people saw ‘the holy ghost’ in the bible and were like ‘well, that MUST be right’.

so yeah english is a really stupid language with some of the most ridiculous spelling can we take a second to ponder on the fact that a kids movie did lady armor better than the entire film and comic industry guess who i'm talking about did you guess? Well you're fucking WRONG because it's Susan goddamn Pevensie

They gave her light armor, appropriate for a small archer:chainmail, an arm brace, chest plate, and a light skirt she can easily run around murderizing dudes in the face in her hair is also only loose in the promo pictures because Susan is fucking busy not dying because her hair was flying into her eyeballs so she braids that shit back her mail shirt is also loose enough that it doesn’t impede her arm movements it’s almost like she’s dressed for a fight wow

I like the pinks and purples under her bitchin as hell leather armor here, because you don’t have to be masculine to shoot someone in the goddamn face

Reminder that it really doesn't matter what ways you're marginalized, if you're not black you're just as capable of anti blackness as white cishet people. No amount of "but I'm gay!", "but I'm trans!", or "but I'm not white!" changes that.

And being neurodiverse/disabled isn't an excuse for anti blackness either.

ive known so many "cis" people who've told me they thought they might be trans or nonbinary but they dont really experience dysphoria so they felt like they werent allowed to call themselves trans. how many people have had to live their lives in the closet because they were told they werent in enough pain i've said it once and i'll say it again. EUPHORIA is the greatest identifier of a trans person. not dysphoria. dysphoria is hard to define and thus it's hard to regulate what is and isn't dysphoria. but euphoria? that feeling u get when someone uses the right pronouns? that "i can't contain my smile" sort of joy? THATS what the trans experience is all about. that's what unites us

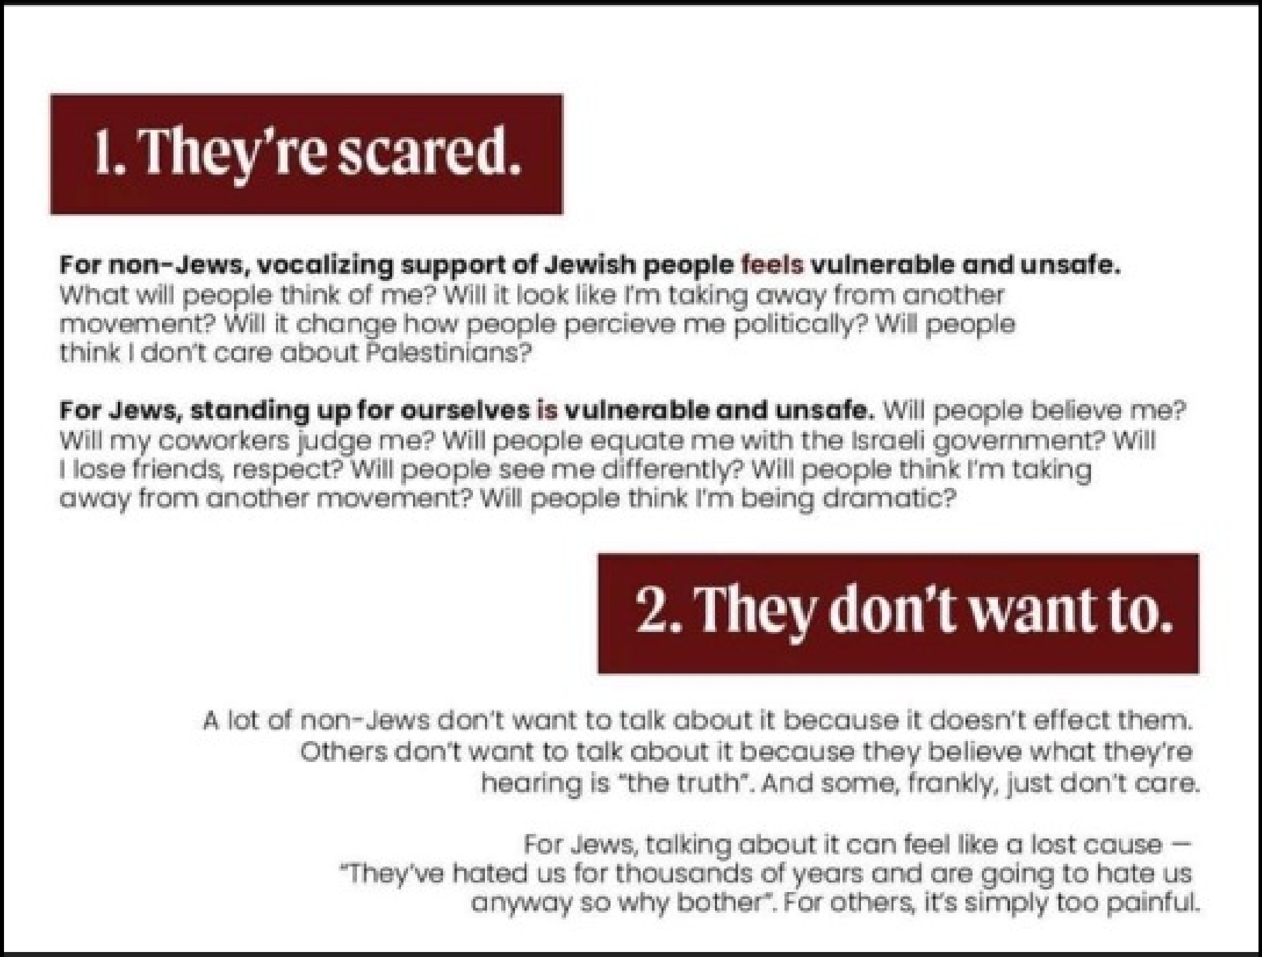
IF IT'S SUCH A BIG DEAL WHY AREN'T MORE PEOPLE TALKING ABOUT IT?

MORE PEOPLE TALKING ABOUT IT?



1. They're scared.

For non-Jews, vocalizing support of Jewish people feels vulnerable and unsafe. What will people think of me? Will it look like I'm taking away from another movement? Will it change how people percieve me politically? Will people think I don't care about Palestinians?

For Jews, standing up for ourselves is vulnerable and unsafe. Will people believe me? Will my coworkers judge me? Will people equate me with the Israeli government? Will I lose friends, respect? Will people see me differently? Will people think I'm taking away from another movement? Will people think I'm being dramatic?

2. They don't want to.

A lot of non-Jews don't want to talk about it because it doesn't effect them. Others don't want to talk about it because they believe what they're hearing is "the truth". And some, frankly, just don't care.

For Jews, talking about it can feel like a lost cause — "They've hated us for thousands of years and are going to hate us anyway so why bother". For others, it's simply too painful.

Honestly, I don't want to talk about it either.

But if I don't call out antisemitism, who will?

Sadly I am afraid to know the answer to that question.

And that's exactly why it's so scary to be a Jew right now.

Okay, real talk, guys.

I am going to be honest: I have personally dealt with some shit face to face, and the majority of it came from the left and from people who support the Nation of Islam. I have been asked if I cut Christian or Muslim children for blood to put in my bread dough, I have been told that 'my people' were behind 9/11, I have been taught by a professor who was convinced Jews like me manufactured AIDS to depopulate minority communities like her own, I have been harassed for attending Rosh Hashanah services, I have been threatened with rape and death for being a quote unquote 'kike', I have had people crash my Passover Seder to tell me that we are the Egyptian slave drivers and black trans women are the true slaves, my Rabbi has been spat on by strangers, my local Orthodox community has buddy systems because people keep getting jumped, I have had to go through three stages of security to enter my congregation because a man shot and killed people in our synagogue, and more. This is just scratching the service of violence, both overt and covert, I have personally experienced.

Talking about this publicly makes me nervous because I can't point at straight white conservative guys and say that they're the only perpetrators, or even the main perpetrators in my experience. They're not. The majority of the people who did this to me were white dyed-in-the-wool progressives and people of color. It makes me genuinely frightened to say in public because I don't want to be told that I'm making things up to make progressivism look bad, or that I'm not truly a progressive, or even that it doesn't matter that I've dealt with these things because other people have it worse. I am terrified that the people I have become friendly with on this website and that I admire will tell me that I am a racist for speaking the truth plainly, or insinuate that I am not a supporter of progressive causes. I have been showing up to BLM protests for years, I have reached out to multiple black-owned nonprofits to volunteer, and I have donated what little money I have to bail and advocacy funds.

I am a progressive and I believe that people of color are abused in our society and it is our responsibility to do everything we can to make that stop. But I am also a Jew, and right now when we're all doing things that scare us, I need to speak the truth plainly. Antisemitism is a cancer upon our community, and I urge anyone who reads this to critically look at themselves and at the people around them rather than brush this off as another issue belonging solely to white conservatives. Antisemitism is insidious, and it grows so quietly until suddenly its roots are impossible to pull out.

Ask me questions. I am afraid, but I believe that now is a time to be brave.

Even prior to COVID I don't see how you could look at a country with no guaranteed paid sick leave or universal healthcare and go "yeah this one would do great in a pandemic."

twocubes Follow

I looked into it a little; the report, which is by (it says there) the 2019 Global Health Security Index, which, to quote their fucking Excel file, is so it might be pretty easy to tell what's ultimately going on here…

so like, as an example, their score here is a weighted average of a bunch of scores in different categories; one of them is "SUFFICIENT AND ROBUST HEALTH SYSTEM TO TREAT THE SICK AND PROTECT HEALTH WORKERS" which is 16.7% of the score. You won't be surprised to learn that the US is also number 1 within that category.

Now, the country's score in that category is itself an average of scores in a bunch of smaller categories, one of which is "Healthcare access", worth 18.7% of that category.

The score there is itself an average of two numbers: "Access to healthcare" and "Healthcare worker access to healthcare". 50% each.

"Access to healthcare" itself is a weighted (somehow…) average of three numbers:

- The answer to the question "Has the country enacted legislation mandating universal healthcare coverage?" (1 or 0)
- The % of the population with access to skilled birth attendants
- The Amount of money the country spends per capita on healthcare.

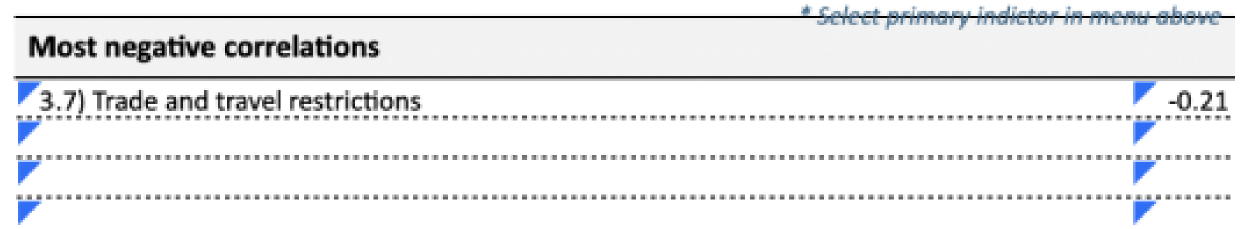
Which… I mean. Only the first one appears to be a measure of access to healthcare? And it doesn't seem like a terribly good proxy, but… anyways, the point is, the extent to which Everybody Has Access To Healthcare appears to be only worth about (18.7% * 50% * 33(?)% =) 3% of… how sufficient and robust a country's healthcare system is in a FUCKING PANDEMIC.

which makes it 0.5% of the "pandemic preparedness" score above.

Never trust an index you haven't prepared yourself, tbh.

Bonus thing:

this is a thing from the economist, so of course, what's most negatively correlated with that score?



* Select primary indictor in menu above

Most negative correlations
3.7) Trade and travel restrictions	-0.21

Double bonus:

in case someone is wondering, this is how it's going in reality:

Goodness!

Okay. I'm Canadian so I know a shit ton about staying warm if you're new to the cold there here are some tips!(add more if you know more!)

1. Wear grippy shoes, nothing is worse than snowmelt freezing on your skin.

2.Do not wear jeans as your outter layer. wet denim is the most body heat siphoning mother fucker known to man or god

3. Have a warm drink with you. It will help. Even just some hot soup broth or boiled water will help keep you warm.

4. Wear a moisture wicking layer close to your skin so you don't get cold from your own sweat. You will sweat. That is fine and expected.

5. If you start feeling too warm even though you were cold and like you have to take your clothes of DO NOT. Call 911. You are suffering from hypothermia.

6. Bring a blanket and a heat source that needs no electricity with you in your vehicle. You do not want to be stranded with no heat in the case that something happens.

7. If you are struggling on ice as you're walking, stop. Get your balance and penguin shuffle to a less slippery patch of ground. There's usually less ice on one side of the walk and it's better to walk in the snow next to the sidewalk than it is to eat dirt when ya slip

8. STAY THE ABSOLUTE FUCK AWAY FROM FROZEN BODIES OF WATER. Ponds are deceptive as shit even with the "solid blue tried and true" thing. Go around.

9. Keep kids warm. They run at a higher body temperature and will feel the effects of the cold worse than you.

10. Huddling is your best friend. Even if you don't know the person, remember you're both cold, especially if they don't have the right clothing for the weather.

11. Pay attention to windchill. That is how cold it feels. Dress appropriately please. I know it's tempting to dress for style, but there's nothing stylish about losing your toes to frostbite

12. Don't touch metal if you can avoid it. It will sap your heat and likely freeze to anything wet. Like tongues. Don't fucking lick a pole.

13. If someone licks something metal, pour warm water over their tongue to get them free. If they yank, they will bleed. A lot.

14. Keep your ears, noes, fingers, and toes warm. You're extremities will get cold first and are the most likely parts of your body to get frostbite.

15. If you see someone who may not have a place to be in the cold, offer to help them find a local shelter or library. The elements, especially the cold, are some of the largest threats to those who cannot avoid them.

16. If you find yourself stuck outside for a long time, sleep during the day when it is warmest, and avoid sleeping on the ground. Stay awake as much as you can at night so you have a better chance of staying warm.

Also, look out for your local animals.

Cats will sleep on car wheels where you can't see them - it's elevated, rubber is warmer than the ground, and it's a little hideyhole where they feel safe. Check your wheel wells and under your car before you go driving off, you might save a tiny life.

You can also, if you're so inclined, make a little winter shelter for cats and small animals fairly easily and cheaply.

[Here] is a video from the Ontario SPCA.
[Here] is an even simpler (ad possibly cheaper) version of basically the same thing.
As long as you smooth out the opening (so the lil guys don’t injure themselves on it), insulate, and line it, and then put it somewhere where it’s not going to get flooded or the animal snowed in, you’re grand.
It might not seem like much in the face of subzero temperatures, but it’s damn well better than nothing.

Holy fuck, WaPo is not here to fuck around today.

[Description: an image of a child's handmade paper turkey decoration, captioned "Americans revive spirit of first Thanksgiving by carrying disease to new areas" with a subhead "Across the United States, millions of people pointedly spurning CDC advice as they celebrated...." and then is cut off. The chronicle of the monk Herbert of Reichenau for the year 1021 ends "My brother Werner was born on November 1."

1021 was not an uneventful year. The emperor began a campaign into Italy. Illustrious abbots died. There was an earthquake. But Herbert took the time to note, at the end of the year, that his brother was born.

Of such acts of tenderness is history made.

In 11th century Constantinople, the historian, philosopher, monk, and general insufferable know-it-all Michael Psellos once wrote a letter to his infant grandson. He begins like this:

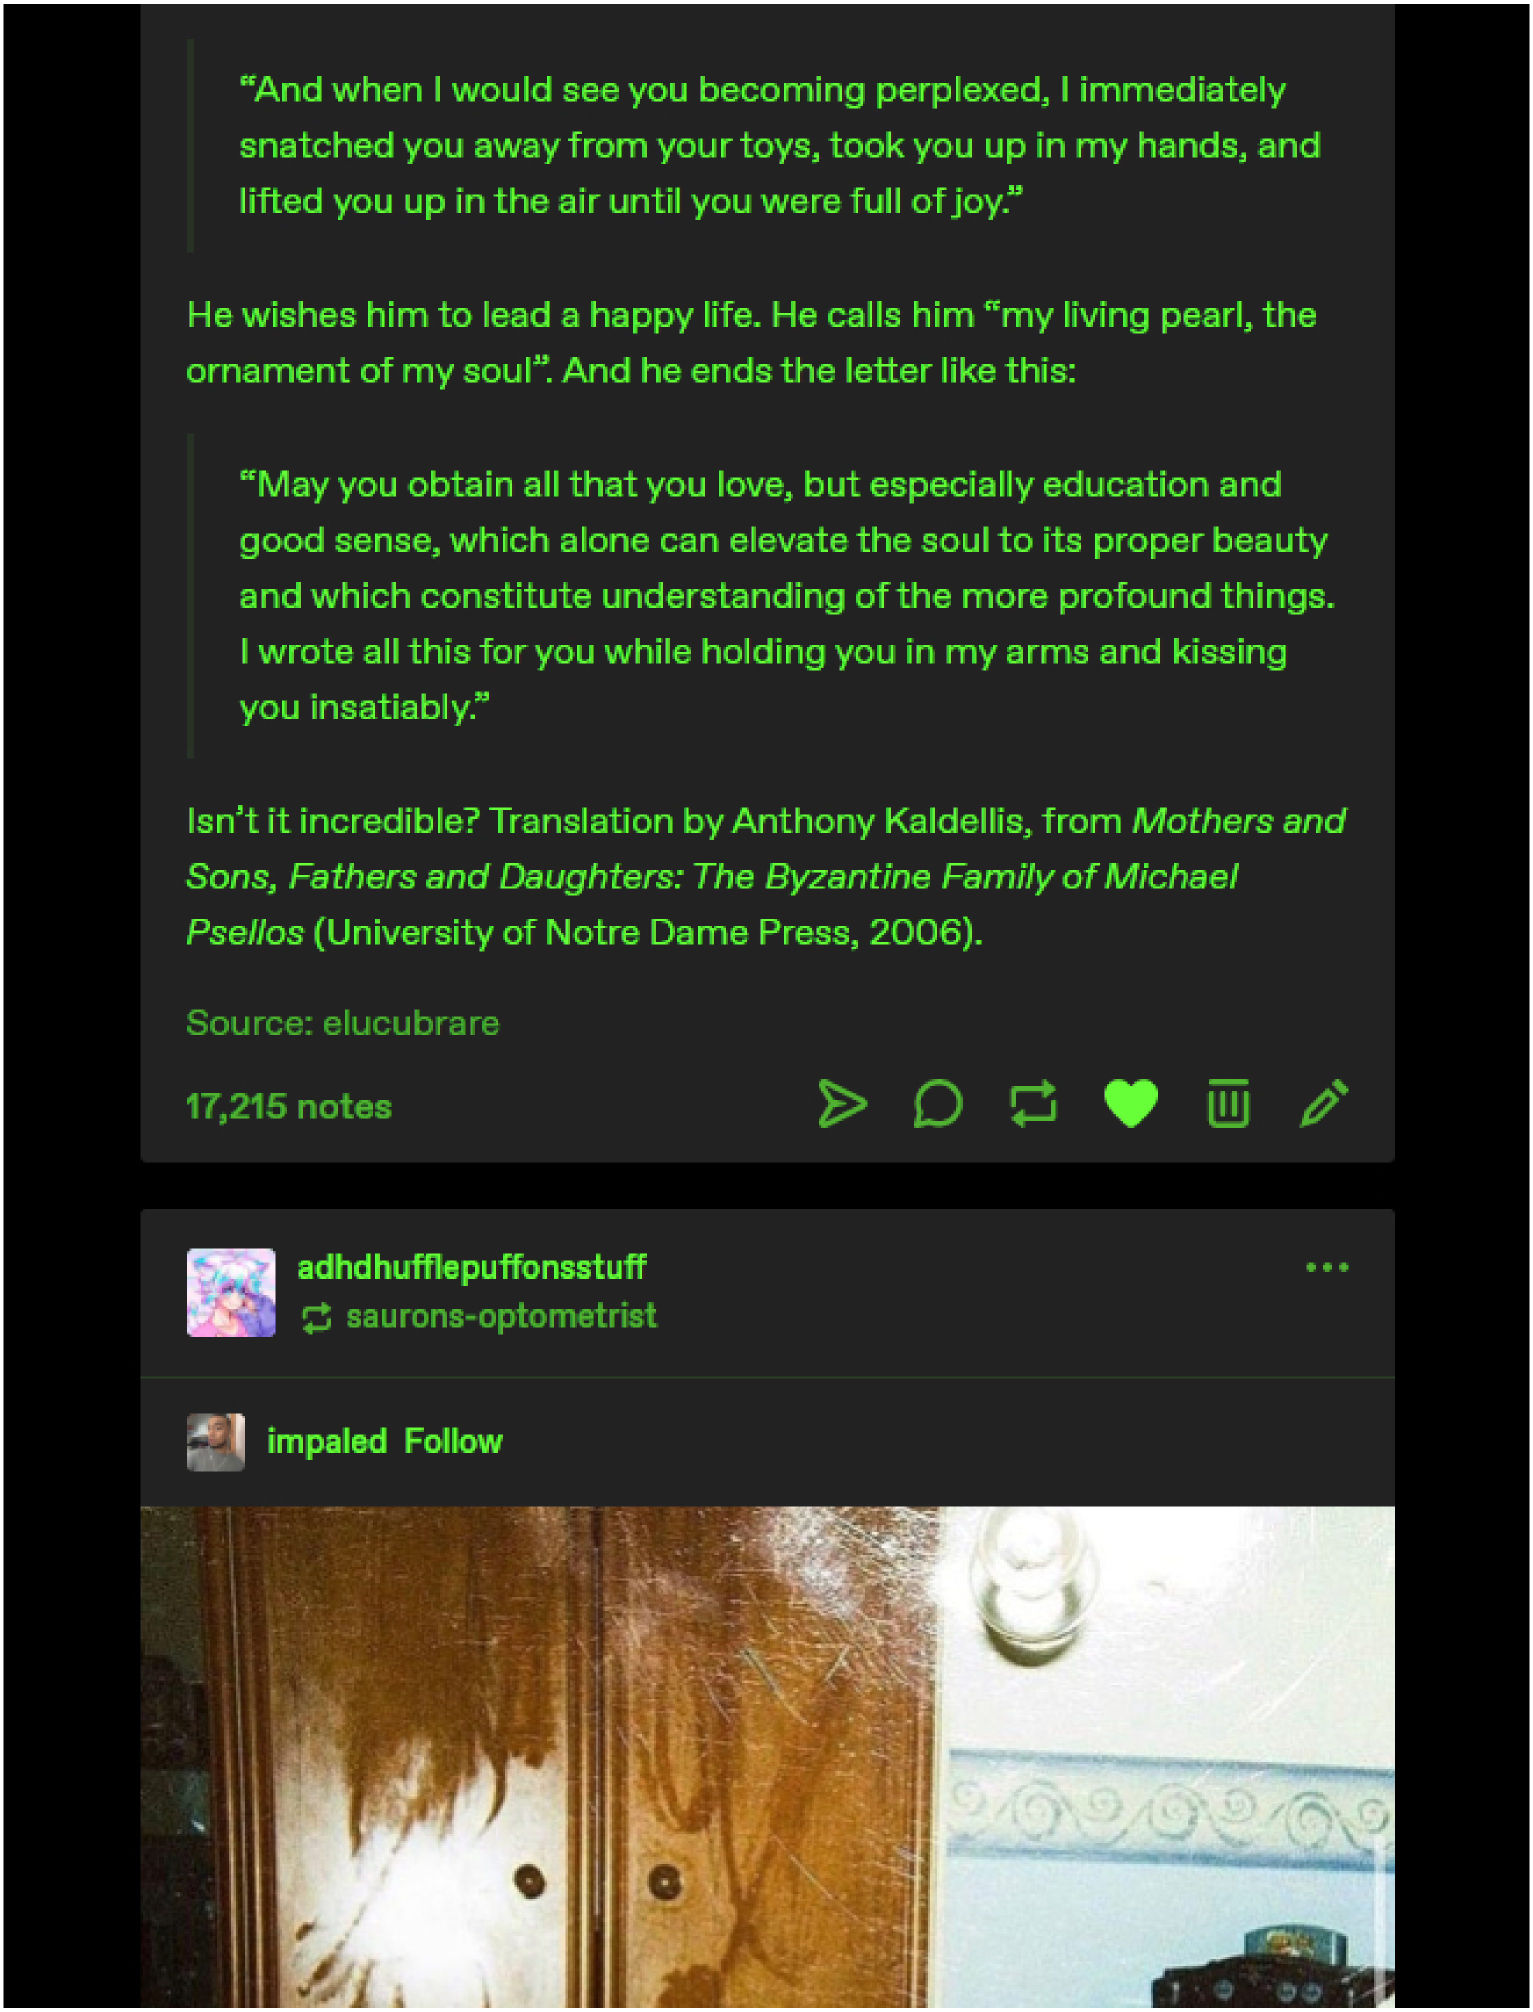
> “Perhaps I will not live to see you, dearest newborn and offspring of my soul, when you reach adolescence, if God so wishes it, or when you mature; for the days of my life are failing and the time approaches when its thread will be cut short. I have therefore decided to address this speech to you in advance of that day and reciprocate your innate charm with the graces of speech. I should be ungrateful and entirely thoughtless if at a time when your perceptions and thoughts are undeveloped (though as far as I alone am concerned you are perfect in these respects, insofar as you hear my voice and feel my affection, cling to my neck, slip into my embrace, and put up with my annoying kisses), I should be ungrateful, I say, if I myself failed to render to you a fitting return.”

He then goes on to praise his grandson, who is the most HANDSOME and INTELLIGENT and RATIONAL child ever born. (No seriously, he calls a four-month-old baby “rational” – rationality and moderation were considered important virtues so OBVIOUSLY his grandson was full of them.)

He observes every little thing the baby does – breastfeeding, taking baths, fussing, babytalking – with unrestrained marvel and delight, complete with flowery descriptions:

> “[Your eyes] moved cheerfully, whenever a smile was about to come upon you. It sufficed for me to take note of this only once—I needed no Delphic tripod or bacchic ecstasy—to prophesy without hesitation from the kindly look in your eyes that you were about to laugh. And, true enough, you moved your lip slightly, blushed, and, behold! you laughed.”

He takes special pride that the baby likes him, and puts himself in the picture too:



> "And when I would see you becoming perplexed, I immediately snatched you away from your toys, took you up in my hands, and lifted you up in the air until you were full of joy."

He wishes him to lead a happy life. He calls him "my living pearl, the ornament of my soul". And he ends the letter like this:

> "May you obtain all that you love, but especially education and good sense, which alone can elevate the soul to its proper beauty and which constitute understanding of the more profound things. I wrote all this for you while holding you in my arms and kissing you insatiably."

Isn't it incredible? Translation by Anthony Kaldellis, from Mothers and Sons, Fathers and Daughters: The Byzantine Family of Michael Psellos (University of Notre Dame Press, 2006).

The Very Basics of Not Killing Your Computer

- AVOID HEAT STRESS

If you have a laptop DO NOT use it on a soft surface like a pillow or on a blanket, it'll block the vents on your computer and make it get really fucking hot inside.

If you have a desktop you gotta open it up and blow out the dust sometimes.

If you are moving your laptop in a bag turn the laptop off. Don't put it to sleep, don't just shut the screen, turn it off, because otherwise it's in the bag generating heat and there's nowhere for the heat to go in the bag. OFF. Not sleep. OFF.

- DO NOT DROP

Okay I know that should be obvious but drop damage to your hard drive is bad bad news. Be as careful as you can to set your computer gently on flat surfaces; don't leave it hanging out on a bed where it can get knocked off, don't set it on the roof of your car. And yes, just dropping it a couple inches can kill your hard drive or totally shatter your screen.

- DON'T PUT SHIT ON YOUR KEYBOARD

Look I've seen four people ruin their laptops because they had a pen on the keyboard and closed the laptop and it fucked up the screen and the keyboard and it sucks so much and you feel awful after it happens because it's so avoidable just don't put things on your keyboard and always check that your laptop is clear before you close it.

- PROTECT YOUR PORTS ON YOUR LAPTOP

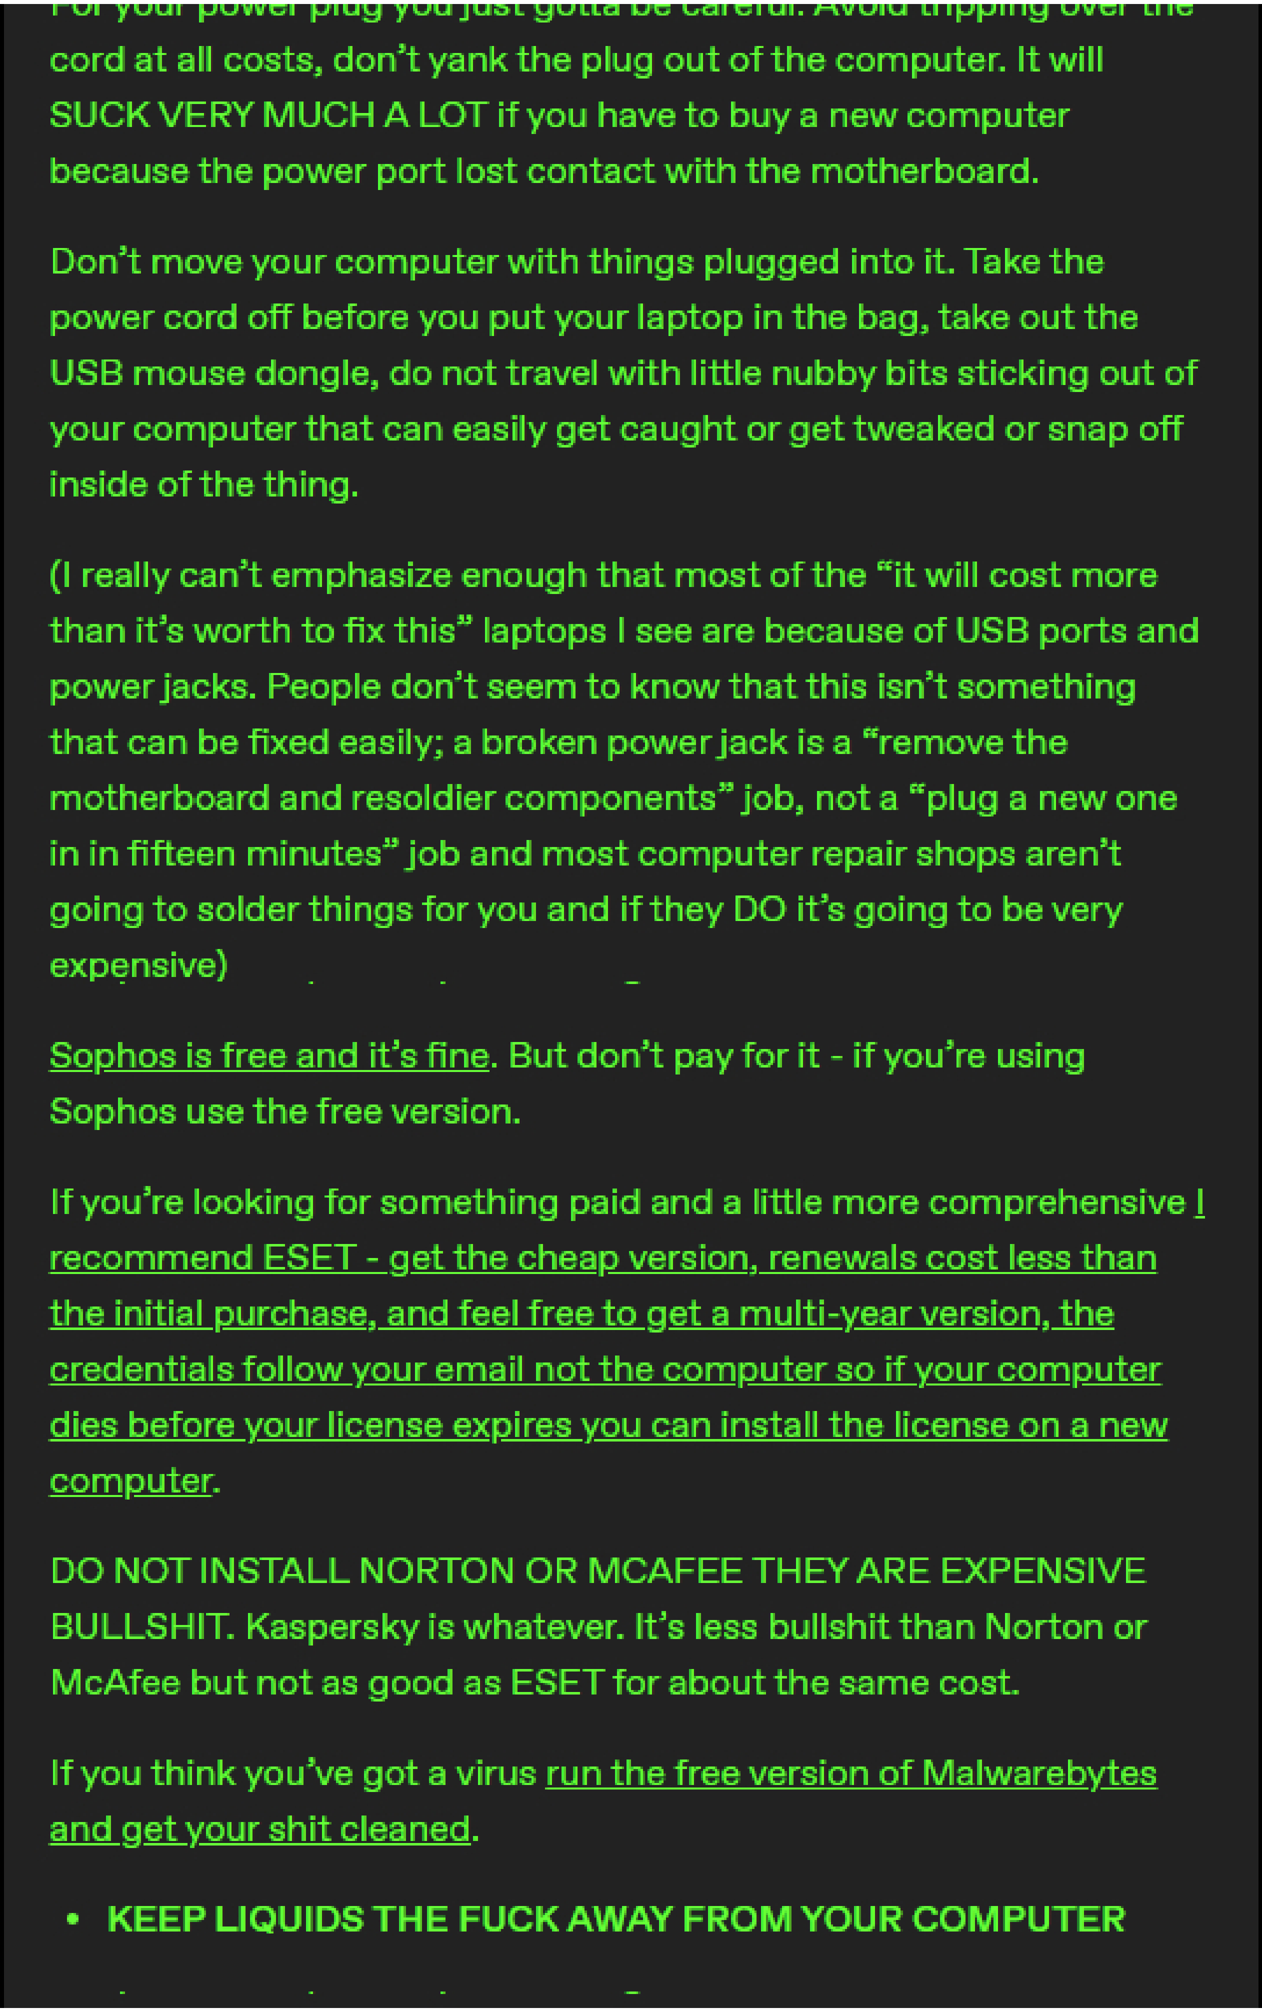
You've only got one power jack and a limited number of other inputs on your computer and if they detach from the motherboard you're fucked. USB ports get damaged because people use them a lot and eventually it weakens the connection and then they just stop working and it sucks. You can get around this with USB ports by using a USB hub to connect things like your keyboard and mouse.

For your power plug you just gotta be careful. Avoid tripping over the



For your power plug you just gotta be careful. Avoid tripping over the cord at all costs, don't yank the plug out of the computer. It will SUCK VERY MUCH A LOT if you have to buy a new computer because the power port lost contact with the motherboard.

Don't move your computer with things plugged into it. Take the power cord off before you put your laptop in the bag, take out the USB mouse dongle, do not travel with little nubby bits sticking out of your computer that can easily get caught or get tweaked or snap off inside of the thing.

(I really can't emphasize enough that most of the "it will cost more than it's worth to fix this" laptops I see are because of USB ports and power jacks. People don't seem to know that this isn't something that can be fixed easily; a broken power jack is a "remove the motherboard and resoldier components" job, not a "plug a new one in in fifteen minutes" job and most computer repair shops aren't going to solder things for you and if they DO it's going to be very expensive)

Sophos is free and it's fine. But don't pay for it - if you're using Sophos use the free version.

If you're looking for something paid and a little more comprehensive I recommend ESET - get the cheap version, renewals cost less than the initial purchase, and feel free to get a multi-year version, the credentials follow your email not the computer so if your computer dies before your license expires you can install the license on a new computer.

DO NOT INSTALL NORTON OR MCAFEE THEY ARE EXPENSIVE BULLSHIT. Kaspersky is whatever. It's less bullshit than Norton or McAfee but not as good as ESET for about the same cost.

If you think you've got a virus run the free version of Malwarebytes and get your shit cleaned.

- KEEP LIQUIDS THE FUCK AWAY FROM YOUR COMPUTER

- KEEP LIQUIDS THE FUCK AWAY FROM YOUR COMPUTER

Again this should be obvious and yet. But seriously, just make a rule for yourself that drinks aren't allowed on the same table as your computer and you'll save yourself a lot of headaches.

- PLUG YOUR COMPUTER INTO A UPS

Okay I fucking hate amazon but here's a thing you should be using, just search the rest of the internet for "surge protector/UPS" and you'll find something that isn't from amazon - APC is a solid brand for this.

Basically you want a fat surge protector that has a little bit of a battery backup and you want to plug your computer (desktop OR laptop) into that instead of into the wall. The benefit of this is twofold:

1) if there's a power surge the UPS will prevent your computer's power supply from getting fried and possibly frying parts of your motherboard

2) if there's a power outage and you're at your computer you'll have enough time to save what you're working on before your computer loses power (like, you'll maybe only have a minute or two on a small UPS but that's still time to hit CTRL+S and keep from losing work)

At a bare, bare minimum your computer should be plugged into a surge protector but NOT directly into the wall.

- BACK YOUR SHIT UP

[we interrupt this yelling for me to tell you that Western Digital has apparently released their new My Passport line and I'm obligated to inform you that you can get a 2.5" USB 3.0 backup drive with FIVE FUCKING TERABYTES OF STORAGE for $130. Or you can get 4TB for $93. Or you can get 1TB for $53. basically what I'm saying is that it is not only cheap computer season it is also cheap hard drive season.]

[also if you're getting a backup drive get western digital not seagate seagate fucking sucks and has a much higher failure rate]

Uh, okay, anyway - Do an image backup of your computer every once in a while so that if you get infected or your hard drive dies or whatever you can just restore from backup and move on like nothing happened.

HERE'S HOW TO DO AN IMAGE BACKUP.

- SAVE YOURSELF THE WEAR AND TEAR

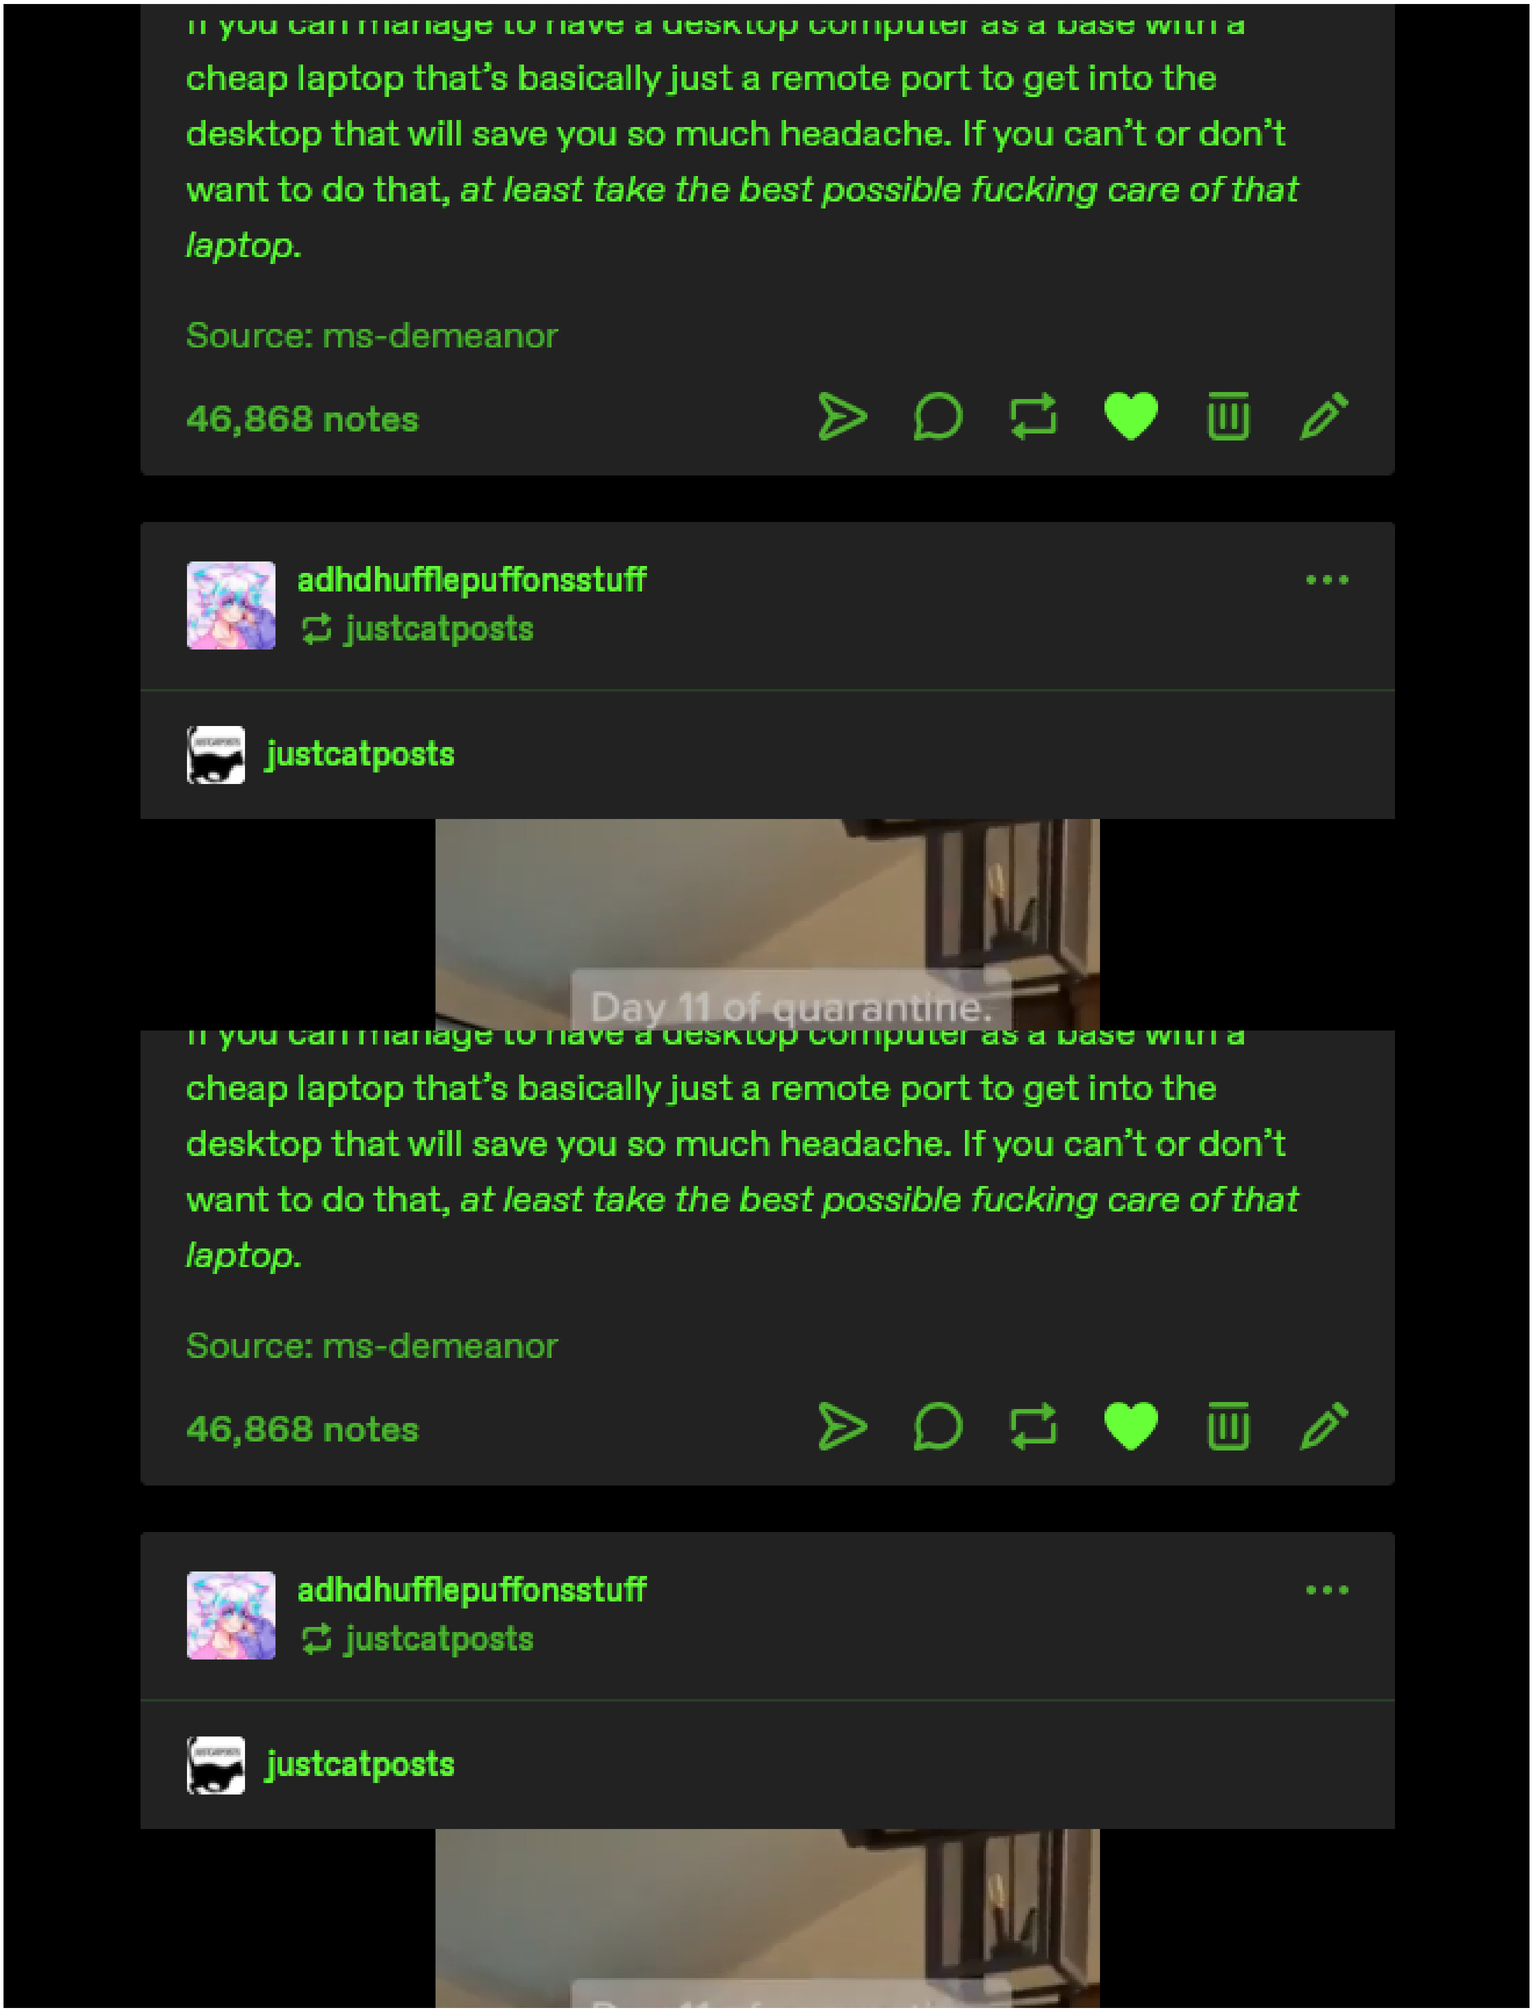
You know what is cheap? USB Keyboards and USB mice. You know what is not cheap? Fixing the touchpad on a laptop or replacing a laptop keyboard.

Get yourself a USB hub, a USB Keyboard and a USB Mouse (wired or wireless, doesn't matter) and if you're using your laptop at home plug that into your computer.

Also if your keyboard on your laptop breaks it's fine just to use a USB keyboard instead I promise; if the screen breaks it's also usually cheaper and easier to get a used or inexpensive monitor than it is to



If you can manage to have a desktop computer as a base with a cheap laptop that's basically just a remote port to get into the desktop that will save you so much headache. If you can't or don't want to do that, at least take the best possible fucking care of that laptop.

The Cuban authorities spotted the ship for the first time on May 16, near a restricted military zone, west of Havana. They made many unsuccessful attempts to communicate with the crew and finally mobilized three patrol boats to intercept it.

When they reached it, they were surprised to find that the ship was actually a nearly 100-year old steamer identified as the Cotopaxi, a name famously associated with the legend of the Bermuda Triangle.

What if there was an apocalypse but some people were really really in denial and optimistic and thinking everything will be back to normal soon?

Like they'd be foraging through the ruins of New York for supplies, shooting raiders in the face and saying "Man, this recession is really bad, huh?"

FEMALE PRESENTING AUTISM???

800-dick-pics Follow

I refused to give my adhd evaluator my gender/sex so she logged my traits and answers from the questionaires both for the "male" adhd and "female" adhd traits and the results varied so much that even my evaluator was shocked by it bc it was the first time she had done both "genders" for one person (and i think it opened her eyes on how wrong and inaccurate sexed tests/evals are). my hyperactivity, and impulsivity scored lower (aka downplayed) on the female page but had a HUGEEEEE spike for it on the male page, their were things like my emotional dysregulation that were also"less apparent" on my female results than my male ones.

Genuinely ask who ever is evaluating you to remove sex/gender from the evaluation process and if they refuse demand that they test you as a "male" and "female"

Lots of us esp black and brown autistics and adhders are getting duped out of a proper diagnosis bc white perisex cishet people are seen as the "standard" for literally everything in the medical field

The "The Glory Hole" at the Monticello Dam in Lake Berryessa, California, came in handy earlier this year for the first time in a decade due to the heavy rains California had. The 72-foot wide hole was put in place to handle any potential overflow, funnelling excess water down to Putah Creek on the other side of the dam. Lake Berryessa can hold about 521 billion gallons of water before needing the spillway, so as you can imagine it's a rare sight to see in action!

Tomb of Bannentiu, Bahariya Oasis

Bannentiu tomb located in Bahariya oasis in Western Desert. It was plundered in antiquity and re-used for collective burials. In fact, it was during the Roman Period. Furthermore, the tomb shows that pious nobility of the oasis during the Late Period. And that is why Egyptologists consider it important. In fact, the decoration in the tomb damaged some years ago. It was when thieves hacked away some of the reliefs.

Maybe we watched the show differently because I didn't think you were supposed to side with Jo when she was on her bullshit if you did that's a you thing.... not the show

I'm not defending her cause she's white I'm defending her cause I like her character and I thought your post was dum

1.) No, it doesn't call her out lol. Because whenever she's 'called out' for it, she is always reinforced or defended either by her friends or well-the narrative. She is still seen as a spokesperson for feminism and activism at her school. Like, that is her whole point. And no she's not supposed to be perfect, but we can also critique her when the narrative fails to.

2.) when did i say they were the only ones mistreated. Of course Jo is mistreated-when did I say that she wasn't. Like yes, she's mistreated but that doesn't exempt he racism that is never addressed. Like these two ideas can coexist.

3.) Maybe we watched the show differnetly.... , "sides" what are you talking about. why are we talking about sides, I'm just talking about white feminism and shit that i saw in the show.

like i said, go back to excusing your white problematic fave. if you can't take that a black person is gonna call her out, then maybe go somewhere else. y'all stay being annoying.

like you literally flipped shit bcs i said i didn't like a white girl lol.
